TVA Promises To Help Speed Test Case to Highest Court

Wins Over 18 Private Utilities in 3-Judge Decision

APPEAL PLANNED
All Major Activities Sustained in Lower Court Ruling

Chattanooga, Tenn. — (AP) — The Tennessee Valley authority, victorious over 18 private utilities in a test of its constitutionality, promised cooperation today in speeding the case to the United States Supreme court.

Every major activity of the government agency's unified program (flood control, navigation and power production) was held valid yesterday by a three-member federal court.

Attorneys for the utilities announced they would appeal. James Lawrence Fly, TVA chief counsel, said the agency would assist "in every way" toward expediting a final decision.

In New York, Wall street reported that utility security owners were depressed especially by the ruling that TVA power competition was not only "lawful" but that privately owned power companies "have no immunity from lawful competition even if their business be curtailed or destroyed."

However, the financial community believed generally that power securities already had discounted the possibility of a TVA decision, having been weak for some time.

Lillenthal's Comment
"The decision paves the way for a rational, businesslike adjustment of relations between TVA and the private power companies," said David E. Lillenthal, the TVA director who was most concerned since the electric program was inaugurated under his guidance.

"TVA can go forward in the development and saving of our natural resources without the lawsuits which have held up the constructive work for four years."

The reaction in Washington was varied.
"In view of the fact Sister Allen was a member of the court, I am not surprised," said Representative Knutson, Minnesota, the TVA director who was most concerned since the electric program was inaugurated under his guidance.

Mississippi's Democratic Congressman Rankin, a TVA champion, said "I hope it will mean the end of the attempt of the power trust to control the people by spurious injunctions."

The utilities sought an order halting the entire power program.

Unanimous Ruling
However, District Judge John J. Gore of Tennessee, who issued a temporary injunction against the TVA in the same suit in 1936, concurred with Judge Allen and District Judge John D. Martin to make yesterday's decision unanimous. Judge Gore's injunction was dissolved last year by a circuit court and the Chattanooga hearing followed.

Governor Gordon Browning of Tennessee proposed a plan last night whereby the state would "join hands" with TVA toward the acquisition of privately owned utility properties by the federal agency and subdivisions of the state.

Browning said this was to "give to the people of Tennessee TVA power without the necessity of endless litigation." His proposal followed the "last resort" suggestion advanced recently by Wendell Willkie, president of the Commonwealth and Southern corporation, which owns several operating companies in the same territory as TVA.

Willkie proposed that the government buy out its companies' facilities completely, but he has opposed this, asserting that only such properties as were needed should be purchased.

Fasting Pastor Plans Weekly Radio Lesson

Wedding In Snouty Society

The bride, Burma Rangwona, and the groom, Jumbo Toth, and best man were in cutaways, grey trousers. Two other elephants held the bride's veil at this, the world's first all-pachyderm wedding, recently in Los Angeles. Bride and groom didn't mind. Too thick-skinned even to appreciate publicity of successful affair. Want-ads in The Post-Crescent. But people like them. They liked this one and rented the rooms.

Coroner's Jury at Spooner Names Anders as Slayer of Charles Ross and James Gray

REPORTED PLOTTER

Rolph M. Forsyth, above, a Vancouver, B. C. school teacher, at Seattle, Wash., was reported by a companion, George Partridge, 22, to have plotted to explode a bomb beside the Japanese liner Hiye Maru, in dock at Seattle. Two hundred sticks of dynamite, 28 fuses and a mechanical device for setting it off were found in a bomb under the dock. Forsyth's body was found in the water near the ship. He had drowned.

U. S. Steel Corp. to Spend 80 Million On Modernization

Total to be Increased if Business Warrants, President Says

Washington — (AP) — President Benjamin F. Fairless said today the United States Steel corporation planned to spend about $80,000,000 on plant modernization within the next nine months.

"In addition," he said in a statement to the senate unemployment committee, "if business conditions warrant, there will be undoubtedly other expenditures in considerable amounts during 1938."

"It is clear," he said, "that prices can not be reduced without a corresponding reduction in costs, of which wages are the most important part."

Chairman Byrnes (D-S. C.) said today that investigators for the senate unemployment committee had found many persons apparently were "making a career" of working for WPA.

"We have figures which show that in some states as high as 70 per cent of the WPA workers have been drawing checks ever since the program started," he said. WPA had its inception in 1933.

The chairman said agents for the committee had investigated the record of many of the long-time relief employees to determine why they had not obtained other employment.

Relief Situation
Typical statements on unemployment and relief by mayors in various parts of the country, supplied the committee, included:

Kenosha, Wis.: "Four thousand men laid off since Nov. 15."

St. Paul, Minn.: "Our case load in September, 1937, was 532 cases less than in September, 1936, but by December 1937, our case load was 626 more than in December, 1936."

A business statistical expert, Vice President Thomas S. Holden of the F. W. Dodge corporation, testified that to regard "the mild recession that took place in the latter part of 1937 as a new depression seems to be almost absurd."

Holden, whose business is the compilation of statistics on the construction industry, asserted that a temporary check in building "usually occurs when the country is halfway up the recovery cycle."

Church Unity Is Aim in England

Each Group Would Keep Own Form of Worship Under Proposal

London — (AP) — Leaders of the Church of England and Baptist, Methodist and other Protestant churches advanced cautiously today a suggestion for church unity, but with each group to keep its individual forms of worship.

The rough-hewn scheme was presented as a basis for discussion of church accord, but there was in prospect fierce controversy among the 32,000,000 persons affiliated with the Church in England and Wales.

London newspapers generally hailed such a suggestion for unity as a great religious stride, even if it were to fail. The churches have followed separate ways for 300 years.

The plan was drawn by a joint conference of representatives of the Church of England, the state church with King George VI its titular head, and of the Federal Council of Evangelical Free Churches.

Hoover Calls Prisoner 'Cold-Blooded, Ruthless, Atrocious Killer'

St. Paul — (AP) — The Dispatch said today it had learned federal agents, including members of the federal bureau of apprehension national kidnap squad, were conducting an intensive search in northern Minnesota and northwestern Wisconsin for possible harborers and accomplices of Peter Anders, confessed slayer.

St. Paul — (AP) — Classified by J. Edgar Hoover, federal bureau of investigation chief, as a "cold-blooded, ruthless and atrocious killer," Peter Anders today stood formally named as the slayer of Charles Ross and James Atwood Gray.

A coroner's jury sitting last night at Spooner, Wis., held that Ross, wealthy Chicagoan, and Atwood, Anders' partner in crime, "were murdered by one Peter Anders."

Two federal agents, D. R. Brown and J. L. Madala, appearing before the jury said that both Ross, who was kidnaped last Sept. 25 by Anders and Gray, and Gray had been killed at a dugout near Spooner, where their bodies were found Thursday by FBI men headed by Hoover.

'Cold-Blooded Killer'
In an interview here last night, Hoover said Anders was "the most cold-blooded killer" ever encountered by the bureau of investigation.

Hoover said Anders, who was arrested at Los Angeles Jan. 14, and flown here, will be taken to Chicago where he will face kidnap-murder charges, with the death penalty possible under the Lindbergh kidnaping law.

The F. B. I. chief would not indicate when or how he would leave with Anders, but it was expected the trip would be made in the plane which brought them here from the west coast last Tuesday night.

Recovered $30,000
Since coming to St. Paul, Hoover, with a squad of federal agents, took Anders to northern Minnesota where, near Emily, Anders pointed out the hideout where Ross was held captive, and where $30,000 of the $50,000 ransom money was recovered. Then a trip was made to a point near Spooner, where Anders yesterday led the way to Ross and Gray's bodies.

Hoover said Anders was a man of "vicious moods," and that, while he had no previous police record, the F. B. I. was running down many clues of his crime career, which included several kidnappings and bank robberies.

Anders told federal agents, Hoover said, that he believed he was committing the "perfect crime" in the kidnaping and slaying of Ross, and "was sure he had thwarted us."

Ross' body was to be sent today from Spooner to Chicago, and that of Gray to Providence, Ky., where a sister lives.

Continue Hunt for Bombing Plotters

Official Believes 'Person Or Agency' Directing Activities

Seattle — (AP) — Police authorities looked for a "plot behind the plot" today in their investigation of a bizarre attempt to bomb the Japanese liner Hiye Maru.

Investigators said the death of Rolph M. Forsyth, 28, Vancouver, B. C. school teacher who drowned Thursday after pushing a bomb-laden raft toward the liner, might have sealed the secret of the fantastic plot. But they continued to question George Henry Partridge, 22, also of Vancouver, Forsyth's admitted accomplice.

"Experience with espionage will convince you," Police Captain Marshall Scaffaro said, "that attempts of this kind always are carried on by isolated units, ostensibly entirely divorced from any guiding hand behind the scenes."

"But my experience and that of all my colleagues in this case also lead us to believe there must be some person or agency directing the activities of this bombing unit."

Police said the home-made bomb, containing 360 dynamite sticks, enough dynamite to blow a six-foot hole in the hull of the liner, missed fire only because water leaking into the bomb's covering, a suitcase, stopped the time device when the contact hand was only one-eighth of an inch from the firing position.

See Brighter Prospects for U. S. Business

Economists Say Situation Substantially Better In Last Month

EXPECT ADVANCES

Employment Gains are Indicated During Current Month

Washington — (AP) — Federal and private economists alike, informed persons said today, have reported to the White House that the business outlook has improved substantially in the last month.

Recovery has not yet been resumed, most of the economists agreed, but the chart of business health is smoothing out in significant fashion.

One expert called an important "straw in the wind" increased employment in the textile and shoe industries. The textile increase was contrary to seasonal expectations and the shoe boost was more than seasonal. Another economist attached considerable significance to a recent jump of building permits in New York City.

Predict More Employment
A third forecast employment would be higher at the end of this month than at the beginning because of an apparent effort of many manufacturers to spread the work now available.

Another symptom was said to be the steadiness and occasional increases in some raw material prices. The wholesale commodity price index is now higher than it was a month ago.

These views of men on whom the president relies for advice about business prospects brought speculation that the chief executive has in mind principally long range problems rather than the immediate economic situation in his conferences with business, labor and agriculture representatives.

Begin Experiment
In asking the automobile industry yesterday to work out a program for regularizing production and sales, Mr. Roosevelt began an experiment which he has indicated he hopes to extend to business generally and not merely as a "temporary" measure.

At the suggestion of the chief executive, leading figures in the motor industry undertook to eliminate by agreements bad practices in production and distribution.

They sought particularly to find some way to end what the president called "high pressure" selling of automobiles on an installment basis. Confering with them were executives of the big automobile finance companies.

Question Man in Death Of Mrs. A. M. Skendore

De Pere — (AP) — Sheriff Clifford Kellner said today he had detained Alex Seymour, occupant of a shack near a paper mill here, for questioning in connection with the death of Mrs. Anderson M. Skendore, found dead near the mill Thursday morning.

Kellner said Seymour denied assaulting Mrs. Skendore, but added that both of them had fallen on the walk along the paper mill spur. The sheriff said Seymour admitted that a jackknife found near the body was his. The woman died from a fractured skull.

Assistant District Attorney Charles K. Bong said Seymour had admitted having improper relations with Mrs. Skendore, and being in her company the night before she died, but he repeated his assertion he did not assault her. Seymour is 65.

China Clipper Forced To Return From Flight

San Pedro, Calif. — (AP) — The Pan American Airways China clipper, forced back from a flight to Honolulu by gasoline line trouble 600 miles at sea, alighted safely in the Los Angeles harbor here at 6:35 a. m. (3:05 a. m. C. S. T.) today.

The giant seaplane's four motors were functioning perfectly as it swung in over Long Beach, circled Reeves field, naval port on Terminal island, and then settled into the water.

Tokio Regime Admits Need for More Men and Money for Chinese Conflict

Tokio — (AP) — The Japanese government admitted today its need for more money and men to fight China, acknowledging the conflict would be a lengthy one, and laid down as one of its basic aims an economically linked China, Japan and Manchoukuo.

Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye outlined the economic objectives of the Far Eastern war, and with Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, Naval Minister Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai and War Minister General Gen Sugiyama presented to the Japanese diet, (parliament) a detailed account of the six and one-half months of conflict.

Their general conclusions were that China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek had refused to make peace, therefore a new and favorable China government was necessary; that an end to the undeclared war still was far distant; and that the army must greatly increase its strength in China.

Answering questions from the floor of parliament, Konoye said that "if necessary Japan will declare war against the Chiang Kai-Shek regime but never deal with it."

He said the government was taking every measure to destroy the national Chinese government and was aiding the provisional government established under Japanese inspiration at conquered Peiping.

Such aid, he explained, did not infringe the sovereignty or territorial integrity of China.

Each expressed gratification for friendly understanding by the United States and Great Britain, permitting peaceful settlement of incidents like sinking of the American gunboat Panay; re-emphasized Japan's regret for such incidents, and renewed assurances every effort was being made to avoid injury to third powers.

Jury Convicts 16 Major Oil Companies, 30 Individuals of Plot to Raise and Fix Prices

Message Asking For Larger Navy Expected Monday

Roosevelt Likely to Ask Power to Build All Types of Warships

Washington — (AP) — House leaders said today President Roosevelt probably would send to congress legislation to authorize construction of all type of warships in excess of the present statutory limitations which were based on the now defunct 1930 London treaty.

In passing the navy bill the house crushed an attempt to eliminate $70,000,000 battleships.

The measure as sent to the senate carried $26,723,196 more than the navy had for the current fiscal year and included money to start work on 20 vessels in addition to the two proposed dreadnaughts. However, the bill's total was $11,138,977 below the figure recommended by the budget bureau.

Under the new construction, the bill would make available funds to continue work on 74 vessels now under way.

Objections were raised, however to any further expansion of the navy. Members of the anti-battle-ship bloc served notice they would demand full explanation as to "what emergency we are arming for."

The brother of Representative Thomas R. Amle (P-Wis.) brought the Abraham Lincoln brigade fighting for the loyalists.

Captain Amle says he believes General Franco blundered in using military airplanes to bomb cities where mostly women and children were wounded and killed.

From his experiences on the Spanish war front, Amle predicts the world has seen the end of trench warfare as practiced in the World war.

He believes the trenches will be buried so far underground that tanks and airplanes cannot hurt the men, nor can machine gunners or snipers get at those in the trenches.

Subterranean passageways will lead to pill boxes harbor machine gun nests, Amle predicts.

Chautemps' Cabinet Pushing Its Policies

Paris — (AP) — The radical socialist government of Premier Camille Chautemps, backed by overwhelming support in the chamber of deputies, began work today on measures designed to translate its policies into law.

The chamber gave Chautemps' government its first pledge of confidence by a vote of 501 to 1 after the premier announced a drastic reorganization of France's national defenses, putting them on virtually a wartime footing, and pledged his government to defend the franc and carry out the people's front program of social reform.

Some political observers believed Chautemps could count on the communists to threaten to withdraw their votes.

Louis Marin's republican federation and other extreme right parties abstained from voting.

Summary of Government Case Against Oil Firms

Madison — (AP) — Major oil companies were charged with conspiring to raise and fix midwestern gasoline prices to jobbers (wholesalers) in 1935 and 1936 by a program of buying gasoline of independent refiners at progressively increasing prices. The jobbers' contracts with major companies were based upon published quotations of the "spot market"—sales of independents at their refineries.

Originally three trade publications went to trial along with 23 oil companies and 46 of their executives and minor officials. The indictment charged the trade journals by publishing the spot market prices paid by the major companies in the buying program.

Publications Freed
At the close of the government's case, Federal Judge Patrick T. Stone on government motion freed the publications, an editor and five companies. On motions for directed verdict Judge Stone acquitted two more oil companies and thirteen of the individuals, reducing the number of defendants to 16 companies and 30 persons.

Throughout the remainder of the case prosecutors took the position that although the publications were innocent, their quotations—which controlled prices charged to the jobbers—were raised indirectly by the action of the majors in creating an artificial demand for otherwise surplus gasoline.

The defense based its claim of innocence on two things—first, the NRA, under which the defendants asserted their buying program began under approval or at least acquiescence of code authorities; second, that regardless of any NRA, the program was a reasonable cooperative activity for improvement of an industry and as such was legal under the so-called "rule of reason" based by the United States Supreme court. Prices rose, the defense contended, because of the natural law of supply and demand.

Started Oct. 4
The trial itself was a mammoth affair. It began Oct. 4. The courtroom, seating only 200 persons with the use of many folding chairs, was so small spectators were barred during the drawing of the jury, from a panel of 100 prospects. By 75 attorneys, 47 dependants—including one who was not brought to trial, and a dozen newspaper men besides officers of the court.

Fourteen jurors—two of whom were alternates and did not participate in the verdict—were kept in custody at a local hotel throughout the nearly four months of the trial. Their families were allowed to visit them in the courtroom on Christmas day under the watchful eyes of the bailiffs.

Of all the persons connected with the case, only one was incapacitated during the trial. S. J. Abelson, one of six shorthand reporters who worked in ten-minute relays, fell

James Kerwin Is Elected Head of Coalition Group

Plan Meetings in Every County for Anti-LaFollette Campaign

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Staff Correspondent

Stevens Point — The old fashioned town meeting will be revived in every county in the state under plans for a "grass-roots" anti-LaFollette campaign approved by the Democratic-Republican fusion organization steering committee here today.

Assorted Republicans and Democrats — numbering 50 out of a total committee of 70 — met here today to elect permanent officers of the state-wide coalition organization, to map plans for minute county committees and local caucuses for the direct nomination of fusion candidates for the five highest state offices, to draft a platform, and to give consideration to that very substantial problem in practical politics, finances.

James Kerwin, Milwaukee Democratic leader and original mover of the coalition attempt, was elected permanent chairman. Joseph Walsh, Potosi, 1936 Union party candidate for governor, was named secretary.

Speeches from the floor by delegates this morning included bitter criticism of the officials of both old parties for opposing fusion, declarations representing liberalism and genuine democracy, and castigation of the dictatorial minority rule of the state by Governor LaFollette.

Three Fox river valley political leaders and delegates, Dr. F. M. Corry, Menasha Democrat, E. R. Honkka, Appleton Republican, and E. R. Brune, Green Bay, former Democratic state senator, asserted that popular sentiment in that area favors an anti-LaFollette fusion.

Three Men Sentenced For Liquor Conspiracy

Aberdeen, S. D. — (AP) — Meyer Stein of Winona, Minn., alias Al Meyers, was one of three defendants in a federal liquor conspiracy case sentenced in federal court yesterday.

Stein and Ray Trawczynski and Harry Sax of Milwaukee, now under sentence in another case, were given additional terms of a year and a day in Leavenworth penitentiary. Nine other defendants were released on probation.

Continue Search for Missing Beloit Man

Beloit — (AP) — A fruitless week's search for Dan Kelley, 66, former mailman here, continued today with the help of Boy Scouts, members of the American Legion and other organizations. He has been missing from his home since last Monday. Relatives were unable to explain his disappearance.

Defendants fell—all but Charles Arneson, Sturgeon Bay, Wis., have invited President Roosevelt to visit Door county, Wis., and do a bit of fishing off Washington island next fall.

Mr. Roosevelt replied in a personal letter to Senator Duffy: "Thank you ever so much for that grand letter you sent me. I do sincerely appreciate the thoroughness of your constituents in Door county, Wis., and wish you would tell them that I shall be glad to bear their kind invitation in mind. Of course you know that I can never make vacation plans in advance and just now I have no idea what my itinerary for the summer will be."

Defense Prepares to Carry Case to Higher Courts

SENTENCES WAIT
Judge to Hear Motions In Two or Three Weeks

Madison — (AP) — A large segment of the oil industry in the middle west was convicted in federal court today in one of the most gigantic cases ever brought by the government under the Sherman anti-trust act.

A poker-faced jury composed mainly of middle-aged farmers and small town business men brought in verdicts of guilty against 16 major oil companies and 30 of the outstanding individuals in the industry, who were charged with conspiring to raise and fix gasoline prices in 10 midwestern states during 1935 and 1936.

Among the defendants were presidents of nine companies, three officials of a company that had been acquired — Tidewater Associated Oil company — and one man not connected with a major oil company, A. V. Bourque of Tulsa, Okla., secretary of the Western Petroleum Refiners' association.

Seek New Trial
The defense prepared immediately to file motions to set aside the verdicts and for a new trial. Federal Judge Patrick T. Stone, who said he needed a rest badly, announced he would set a date later for hearing the motions—perhaps in two or three weeks—and would delay the questions of sentencing until ruling on the motions.

Both the corporations and the officials liable to maximum fines of $5,000, and the individuals also face possible terms of a year in prison.

Chief Defense Counsel William J. Donovan said he had no statement to make, but other members of the defense staff have said the case would be carried to the supreme court if necessary.

Hammond Claffett, only one of the government's prosecutors in court when the verdict was read, said any word regarding a second indictment pending against many of the same defendants, or about the 10 defendants in this case who were not brought to trial at this time, would have to come from Washington.

Second Indictment
The second indictment charges that the oil firms fixed the margin of profit that could be made by jobbers to whom they sold gasoline. The verdict was the first in an anti-monopoly blast. The case was the largest since the dissolution of the Old Standard of New Jersey trust a quarter century ago.

Prices in Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri and Kansas were involved in this trial.

The jury received the case yesterday, 11 days after it began last Oct. 4, and deliberated a total of about eight hours. The jurors turned to their task at 8:30 this morning and had the verdict ready an hour later. Although the jury-men were kept in custody throughout the nearly four months of the trial, they had for their remuneration $440 apiece. Two alternate jurors were discharged yesterday and made $4 less.

Delay In Court
Nearly an hour elapsed after the verdict was reached before the defendants and attorneys all reached the courtroom.

As the jury filed in, the courtroom buzzed with excitement until spectators heard the verdict. Nelson, 63, of Stoughton, eldest of the jurors, carried the verdict. The jury had elected him to the post of foreman for which he had been the unanimous courtroom nomination.

Defendants also noted that the jurors did not glance at them when filing in. There had been laughter on all sides of the courtroom until that time.

Judge Stone received the verdicts, thumbed through the individual envelopes for the various defendants, and then read the names of all the remaining defendants before reading the final sentence: "We find the defendants guilty as charged." The time was 10:29, five minutes after the jurors took their places.

The upturned faces of the defendants fell—all but Charles Arneson, Sturgeon Bay, Wis., have invited President Roosevelt to visit Door county, Wis., and do a bit of fishing off Washington island next fall.

Mr. Roosevelt replied in a personal letter to Senator Duffy: "Thank

Major Bills are Piling Up While Filibuster Rules

Southerners at Caucus in Effort to Kill Anti-Lynching Measure

Washington—(P)—Important legislation began piling up today on the senate calendar, increasing the urgent desire of administration leaders to end the time-consuming filibuster against the anti-lynching bill.

Southern senators who have been talking for 14 days to prevent the anti-lynching measure from coming to a vote predicted the necessity of setting on to other business would result in shelving of the bill next week.

They called a caucus to decide on strategy in seeking to pigeonhole the measure.

Two major measures—the $553,000,000 navy appropriations bill and the housing conference report—were approved in the house and sent to the senate yesterday.

The housing report, adjusting differences between senate and house bills, may come before the senate Monday.

Majority Leader Barkley (D-Ky.) said that the report could be given preference and taken up. After action on it, however, the senate would return to the anti-lynching legislation.

The independent offices appropriations bill, the administration's government reorganization bill and a proposal to investigate the Tennessee Valley authority also are on the senate calendar. The navy appropriations bill and the bill carrying funds for the treasury and postoffice departments are expected to go from committees to the senate floor soon.

Would Shelve Bill

Because such a mass of legislation is held up by the anti-lynching controversy, Senator Connally (D-Tex.), leader of the southern forces, predicted the anti-lynching measure would be shelved by next Wednesday.

Senator Van Nuys (D-Ind.), an author of the anti-lynching bill, asserted, however, that the measure would be passed "in a week or 10 days."

The senate Monday will decide whether it wishes to investigate the right of John Milton, recently-appointed New Jersey senator, to take his seat.

Trips to Goat Barrens Are Tough on Reporters

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—The sight of dark stretches of undeveloped land which still exist in some parts of New York city where the street lights are far apart, houses are isolated and the snow freezes in irregular ripples on the walks reminds me of a phase of the newspaper business which is seldom mentioned. I mean the ordinary, routine, city side assignment which takes a reporter "way out to hell-and-gone in pursuit of an angle of a big story which is centered at police headquarters or one of those two-headed calf items known as a feature."

The feature story may be something about some frowzy and dirty-handed old derelict living on the edge of a dump who claims to be a fallen star of the Milan opera or an aide-de-camp of the czar or some goofy hermit who lives on goat's milk and has notified the city desk that the world will come to an end at 9:15 p. m. next Tuesday. That type of thing.

It isn't the quality of the story, anyway. It is the drudgery of going after it in a strange part of town that the street in question is about a mile over that way and that to reach it by subway, "L" or street car it will be necessary to go back down to 147th street, and change and walk the quickest thing to do is walk, and at the end of the walk comes a suspicious person, probably a foreigner, takes the reporter for a bill collector or subpoena server and refuses to open the door or listen to reason. Or if it is a police story of some kind and the person really has a story to tell he may get very distinguished little slips containing about 30 words, which he phoned downtown, and say "that's the story. By that time his day didn't matter, so for all our patience all we got was about a No. 1 head back near the Bulgarian communiques, via Berlin (delayed)."

Brooklyn is a terrible maze. Nobody seems to know how to get around Brooklyn, and the natives apparently just follow their respectation to and from work and know nothing about other neighborhoods in the borough. Once Rodney Dutcher and I went to Brooklyn in 9 in the morning after working until 4 a. m. to attend the funeral of a fellow worker in our shop. We gave ourselves plenty of time, but we were shuttled around by policemen and natives with false directions to Protestant cemeteries and Jewish cemeteries and monument works, until about 1 o'clock we finally found the Catholic cemetery and our friend's grave. The family were gone, and they probably think to this day that we were among their friends in the shop turned out.

Picture Chasing Was a Depressing Job, Too. We used to canvass all the photographers' shops in person and the friends of the accused or the victim in quest of any sort of little clue in some of the work went for absolutely nothing.

The most successful picture chaser I ever heard of was an absolute wizard. He always got his picture, but one day a lawyer for a nice young girl sent the management a wash note demanding $100,000 for libel for using her picture as a girl mixed up in some of the worst of it was when the guy on the desk said, "keep it to a hundred. Tight paper."

But it isn't the work, the cold and the uncertainty that make these assignments to the way-off goat barrens so depressing; the worst of it is when the guy on the desk says, "keep it to a hundred. Tight paper."

Question of Gifts

Meanwhile, the granting of millions of dollars in gifts to municipalities which are about to drive private power companies out of the market for the sale of local power raises a question of fairness and equity, and, on this, the country will want to know if Mr. Roosevelt will state flatly that, outside of the TVA area, there will be no such granting of gifts, or whether he will refuse to commit himself on this vital point, which is, after all, the crux of the whole problem of the

Within a few weeks, the supreme court of the United States will act on the question of compelling registration by holding companies under the utilities holding company law. The court could decide the issue on the narrow ground that registration by itself implies no damage and that the companies have a right to come into court if and when the securities and exchange commission shall actually force a dissolution of some holding company. Then the issue could be argued on a later occasion under the "due process" clause of the constitution, but, for the moment, registration does not mean dissolution. It means merely the first, step in a process which raises issues that can be decided subsequently one at a time by the courts.

The Dog Owner and His Dog

BY ALLAN KERR

There are many problems that confront the person who would write an interesting column about dogs, especially if each week's effort is to be instructive, entertaining and new. If the articles fail in these requirements, the reader is not getting a square deal, and the feature has no place in a high class, going newspaper. The reading public must be the judge.

That the dog is an interesting subject for discussion, few will deny. That the subject is broad in scope and vast in its possibilities for an understanding writer, only those close to the dog business can fully appreciate. But what to write about?

It would certainly be unjust to discuss only bench-show champions and field-trail winners. If you don't think so just take a poll of the owners of the other 14,999,631 or so dogs in this canine conscious country of ours. Millions of these people own mongrel dogs, and many of them will tell you they are smarter and more hardy than the pure-breds, quoting some trainer in an animal act as their authority.

Cuteness Wears Off

We have no argument with those who prefer just a black and white dog to the one with a pedigree. But we do wish that there was some way to prevent so many of them from being pushed out onto the street, just because their cuteness wears off and they lean a bit toward becoming elephantine in stature. Such practice, besides being cruel and inhumane, is not good for the general dog situation.

If the entire column were taken up each week with nothing but general dog information, such as housing, feeding, grooming, care and training, there would be a chorus of groans from the old time breeders. For this is ancient stuff to them, and although they are happy to see considerable of this information in print, in order that the novice and the new dog owner may be helped with his problems, their own personal preference runs to things new and of a more specialized nature.

People keep dogs for dozens of different purposes: guarding, companionship, hunting, breeding, tracking, criminals, racing, showing, children's pets, and selling being among the most important. Each one naturally enjoys reading articles slanted toward his own particular interest, and that is what presents the problems that loosen the hair on a kennel columnist's rapidly rising forehead.

For nearly four years, readers have dictated much of the policy of this department. It is their wishes that will help select the material used in the future. Would you like to see a certain breed discussed? Want your pet retrieved from water? Want some show dates? Write your suggestions to us, and if they are within the scope of this column, we'll do our very best to give them prompt attention. And that is all that a Siberian Husky can do.

Go slowly, save lives

Russia and China Could Beat Japan, Eddy Says in Talk

Nipponese Would be "Economically Defeated" Within a Year

If Russia teams up with China, Japan will be "economically defeated" within a year, Sherwood Eddy, world famous traveler, author, and lecturer, said in a talk before Lawrence college students and townspeople yesterday morning in Memorial chapel.

"Russia cannot allow Japan to become a power in the east, which will happen if the Japanese take a major portion of China," Eddy declared.

"If Russia joins China, Japan will be outnumbered 10 to one in man power and resources. Japan would win the openings of a war against Russia and China but would lose out later."

With the exception of the emperor of Japan, who rules by "superstition and propaganda," Stalin has the best backing in the world, Eddy said. The speaker, who has visited Russia 11 times since it became a Soviet, said the country "produced more than any other during the depression."

With fascism in 17 countries and communism in Russia, the democratic countries "are on the defensive."

"But be fair," he urged. "The countries which are attacking Germany, Italy, and Japan, are all crowded. Two of these countries can keep their workers busy only in preparation for war or during war. Hitler came because we gave no relief to Germany and there will be no world peace as long as that half man, half genius rules the honest people of Germany."

Disintegration is likewise going on in Italy, Eddy asserted. Coercive methods used by these governments, their apparent acquisitive ambitions, are "making the world into two armed camps."

Premier Austin Chamberlain of England has allowed Italy too many inroads, Eddy said, fearing Italian interference in the Mediterranean.

Of the Spanish conflict, he commented: "Over 1,000,000 American young men are fighting in the ranks. Children are playing and street cars running five blocks from war in Madrid. . . . Car 32 takes you right up to the front."

There have been three systems since man moved from the primitive stage, Eddy said. Slavery, under which a few persons owned workers, feudalism, under which a few owned the land, and capitalism, under which a few control the means of production. Fascism, he declared, is the last stand of the capitalist system by reason of force. He contemplates a new system of planned socialized economy, a "patient evolutionary advance with no violence," a "cooperative commonwealth."

Chamber, City's Supervisors Meet

Better Acquaintanceship Basis of Yesterday's Gathering

Better acquaintanceship between city officials and the Appleton Chamber of Commerce was the theme of a meeting yesterday noon at Northern hotel attended by chamber directors and supervisors from the various city wards.

"We hope this to be the first of a series of gatherings between city officials and the chamber of commerce," John Neller, president, said at the informal meeting. "Certain-ly all should be well acquainted, the city council, the supervisors, and the chamber of commerce."

V. L. Fiedler of the state highway department office at Green Bay spoke at the meeting, explaining by use of maps the various proposals for re-location of Highway 125 now that the city needs a suitable link with Superhighway 41. He quoted estimates on the different plans.

Dr. Carl Needhold reported on plans for the 4-H club banquet which will be held in the city Feb. 18.

Milwaukee Safety Leader Will Talk At Forum Meeting

Driving School Discussion To Follow Heller-mann's Speech

Attorney A. K. Heller-mann, Milwaukee, chairman of the legislative committee of the Wisconsin Highway Safety council and an outstanding leader in highway safety campaigns, will speak at the first meeting of the newly organized Appleton Forum at 7:30 Monday night in the vocational school auditorium.

"Shall Outagamie county have a driving school?" will be the question around which most of the discussion will center. The Rev. John B. Hanna will be chairman.

Sergeant Carl Radtke, head of the police traffic squad, and another member of the police force will conduct a session on questions concerning driving taken from a list of 150 prepared by the state safety council.

Invitations have been sent to more than 100 organizations in city and county inviting them to send representatives to the first meeting of the Appleton Forum which is planning a series of such gatherings for study and discussion of problems and topics vitally affecting the community. The committee, headed by Mrs. George Wettengel, plans to bring in able speakers from outside the city, of which Attorneys Heller-mann is the first.

Drafted License Law
Mr. Heller-mann first became interested in traffic studies while he was assistant city attorney of Milwaukee in 1933. He is a member of the advisory and traffic committee of the Milwaukee Safety Commission. The city of Milwaukee is noted for the effectiveness of its campaigns for safe driving.

The attorney drafted the drivers' license law which was introduced at the last session of the Wisconsin legislature and has been active in the school for traffic violators established in Milwaukee which has brought nationwide attention.

A graduate of the University of Wisconsin law school, Mr. Heller-mann, helped inaugurate radio broadcasts from the courtroom when traffic violators were being arraigned. He supervised all attorneys during such broadcasts.

Besides his safety work, he is chairman of the board of review of Milwaukee.

Will Review Movement
The Rev. Mr. Hanna will open Monday night's meeting with a summation of the history of the national safety movement, in which the National Council of Safety is the leader. Much of the material which will be studied and reviewed in the forum is based on findings of traffic research experts working under the National Council of Safety program.

After outlining the history and aims of safety campaigns and announcing plans for future meetings of the Appleton Forum, the Rev. Mr. Hanna will introduce Ben J. Rohan, superintendent of driving school for high school students, stressing the need for such instruction among the young men and women who are the future auto owners and drivers of the country.

Attorney Heller-mann will be next to appear. Sergeant Radtke will follow him.

Questions on Traffic
Is there such a thing as a safe driver? What is the greatest factor in accidents? What per cent of drivers involved in fatal accidents have one year or more experience? What is the new bicycle ordinance? These are some of the questions which will be answered in detail during the time Radtke has charge of the meeting.

The Rev. Hanna will then invite the assembly to participate in discussion on the driving school proposal.

Other members of the committee in charge of Monday night's forum are Mrs. R. A. Peterson, Carl Smith, Raymond G. Kleist, and Carl Sherry.

Name Directors of State's Business Board Next Week

Governor Expected to Make His Appointments Next Monday

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—That the new state department of commerce, created along with a batch of other new departments in the 1937 special session of the legislature, will be formally organized next week and that Governor LaFollette will name the board of directors for the new agency Monday was made known at the executive office Friday.

The new department, hailed as the first state agency formed solely to aid Wisconsin business and industry, is a favorite of Governor LaFollette, who thrust it in between a group of "emergency" bills at the extraordinary session of the legislature last fall. The governor has been attributed various motives in sponsoring the bill, and particularly it is widely believed that it represents an effort on the part of the LaFollette administration to offer a truce to state business men.

The new department will be modeled along the lines introduced by the state administration's reorganization act. A part time board of directors will determine policy, and guide the functions of the department, while a full-time $7,000 a year director will have charge of administration and head the administrative staff.

Identity of the director of the department is a subject of much speculation. Rumors have been spread that a present official or employee of the Wisconsin Chamber of Commerce, which is expected to be well represented on the board of directors, will be chosen for the post, which carries a higher salary than most other state executive jobs.

Purpose of the new department is to promote the interests of Wisconsin business and industry, in much the same manner as the state department of agriculture is intended to further the economic welfare of Wisconsin farmers. Cooperation with other state governments, and the federal government, the development of new domestic and foreign markets, and similar duties have been assigned to it.

Author of the act creating the department is Michael F. Kresky, Green Bay Progressive and young Brown-Oconto county state senator.

'Somewhat Colder' Tonight, Forecast

Thermometer Stands at 38 Degrees Above at Noon Today

City streets and sidewalks were gradually clearing of ice and snow and citizens walked about with coats open and their gloves in their hands. The unusually warm weather that settled on Appleton and vicinity this week continued today.

Reports from the weather bureau at Milwaukee indicate that tonight's temperatures in this area will be "somewhat colder" but that generally fair weather will prevail during the weekend.

At noon today the thermometer atop the Post-Crescent building registered 38 degrees and the wind from the west was warm and gentle. For the 24-hour period preceding 9 o'clock this morning, the lowest mark recorded was 32 and the highest, 38, according to charts at the Wisconsin Michigan Power company plant.

Shreveport, La., produced 78 degrees yesterday, warmest in the nation. Modena, Wis., had 10 above.

What does it cost to maintain the White House? Well, the budget recommendations to congress say $449,910 for the next fiscal year, which will include salaries of about 100 employees at the executive's home.

These salaries range from $10,000 a year for the president's assistants down to $1,500 for minor clerks.

Representative Withrow (P-Wis.) is optimistic the house commerce committee will favor his resolution for investigating the automobile manufacturer-dealer relationships and policies. It was approved by a subcommittee. Representative Withrow had been advised by the federal trade commission, he said, that a $50,000 appropriation would be sufficient for an intensive investigation.

ANDERS GUIDES FEDERAL AGENTS
Securely bound at the waist and handcuffed to a federal agent, Peter Anders, confessed kidnaper and slayer of Charles S. Ross is returned to St. Paul after guiding federal agents to digout near Spooner, Wis., where the bodies of Ross and James Gray, accomplice in the crime, were found. Anders also unearthed $30,000 of the $50,000 paid in ransom.

Farmer Makes Money by Taking U. S. Agents and Public to Murder Scene

Spooner, Wis. — (P)—The brutal slaying of Charles Ross, victim of a kidnaper, lined the pockets of Sam Swonger today with greenbacks in such numbers as this northwoods farmer seldom amasses in weeks of backbreaking toil.

Swonger it was who hitched his mare and colt to a bobbed and hauled the federal bureau of investigation agents into the desolate wilds of the Island lake neighborhood to search for the bodies of Ross and one of his abductors, James Atwood Gray.

Peter Anders, held by federal authorities at St. Paul, had confessed slaying both the men, FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover said.

When the bodies had been found and brought to Spooner, the G-men handed Swonger fifty dollars. Sam thanked them and returned to his home. But not for a rest. Scores of persons wanted to see the pit in which the bodies of Ross and Gray were found. Sam obligingly sprinkled marsh hay over the bottom of his shed and took them to and from the scene at $1 apiece. On one trip he had 20 passengers.

It was beautiful, if wild and lonely country into which Sam took the visitors. Eighteen inches of snow covered the trail, crossed and recrossed by deer trails. Up hill and through marshes wound the tortuous trail.

Isolated Spot
At places it was so narrow branches switched against the sleighers' faces. Disturbed, the evergreens dumped their snow burden in clouds. In the most inaccessible section of the wilderness the kidnappers had fashioned their underground prison.

It lay at the bottom of a pothole from which rose brush covered slopes. The nearest farm was two miles away.

There was little chance anyone could hear gunshots or agonized screams.

Experienced woodsmen viewed the cleverly concealed hole and said it never would have been discovered by chance. The roof was flush with the earth's surface. Six to eight inches of earth hid the rough planking. Leaves covered the dirt. Over all were logs and the tops of small trees. To the casual observer there was nothing there but a pile of slashings.

"But for the FBI agents' brilliant work, that hideous torture chamber—and I think it is just this way the idea of using it in other kidnappings—probably never would have been revealed as Ross' grave," Sheriff Robert Willis said.

Wolf River Pike Season Plea Will Be Studied Feb. 9

Petition and Findings Will Be Placed Before Game Commission

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—The troublesome question of an advanced season for pike fishing, recommended this week by 500 Fox and Wolf river valley sportsmen at a Hortonville meeting, will be considered by the state conservation commission at its next meeting, February 9, the conservation department disclosed here Friday.

At Hortonville this week a large crowd of fishermen recommended to H. W. MacKenzie, state conservation director, that the open season on pike be advanced from April 20 to April 10, as was effected last year.

Consider Petition
Although MacKenzie personally objects to the proposition, he said here Friday that the formal petition for such a step, and the results of a department investigation undertaken during the pike season in the Wolf river section last year, will be laid before the members of the commission at their regular February meeting.

MacKenzie says that the results of his investigation last year show that many of the fish are spawning when taken during an early season. Many fishermen in the area affected, however, deny this contention.

The department also announced Friday that Director MacKenzie, who rose from the position of a northern Wisconsin game warden to the chief of the conservation department service in 15 years, will leave next week on his first full vacation since he entered the service of the state 20 years ago. Chief of the department during his absence will be Ernest Swift, deputy director.

U. W. Seniors Battle Over Rooney's Graduation Fee

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—One of the principal conversation topics at the University of Wisconsin just now is the attempt to levy compulsory $2 graduation fee on all 1938 graduates of the state school, a move which has already precipitated rebellion among many organized student groups.

Cause of the fight is George Rooney, the Appleton young man who besides being a mainstay on the university's Big Ten varsity basketball team, holds many campus offices, the most important of which is the presidency of the graduating senior class.

A few days ago Rooney succeeded in getting his senior council, chosen by himself, to approve a levy of dues, proceeds of which would be used for a class memorial and as membership fees for the graduates in the Wisconsin Alumni association.

The proposal immediately raised a storm of protest, which is being led by the Daily Cardinal, student daily newspaper. John Frank, Appleton liberal student leader, announced immediately that he would refuse to pay the assessment, and encouraged others to follow suit.

Today the class stands divided on the question, with the student daily and many of the liberals insisting that Rooney has no power to compel payment, and that seniors' degrees will not be endangered.

Rooney yesterday continued with plans to collect the assessment, which will amount to about $2,500.

Joseph, and William, all of Appleton.

The body will be at the funeral home from this evening to the hour of services and prayers will be conducted there tonight at 7:30. The Holy Name society will conduct prayers at 7:30 tomorrow night.

Prepare Mosquito Hill Ski Slide for Tourney Jan. 30

Expect Arneson to Make Trial Run From New Tower Sunday

New London—Packing of snow on the Mosquito Hill Ski slide was being done by a crew of volunteer workmen the latter part of this week in preparation for the fourth annual ski tournament of the New London Ski club Sunday, Jan. 30.

It is expected that Ingvar Arneson, New London's class A rider, will make a trial run of the hill around 9 o'clock tomorrow morning if conditions are satisfactory. The hill providing one of the largest slides in this section, has not been ridden since completion of the full 90 feet height of the tower and improvement to the underhill. Record jumps are anticipated.

Special attention is being given this year to the comfort of spectators at the meet a week from tomorrow. Reserved parking will be provided for the first time in addition to the usual free double lane parking permitting easy exit. Cars in reserved parking will be situated in an area previously unused at the very bottom of the jump, thus allowing spectators to watch the meet from their cars. Bonfires will be provided on the grounds if the weather is cold.

Entries for the New London tournament are not expected until next week, a few days before the meet, but indications are that a large number of outstanding skiers of the central United States will be entered.

Perform at Plymouth
Tomorrow New London skiers will take part in a meet at Plymouth. Arneson will be defending his title as state champion which he won at the last state open championship at Oconomowoc two years ago. Others entered by the New London club are Leslie Jacobson and Franklin Carlson in Class B, Ruben Vole and Frank Carlson in the Senior class, and Lawrence Kaja and Malcolm Barnitz in Class C.

In the International tournament at Cary, Ill., last Sunday, Arneson placed among the first 11 in a field of 30 top-notch jumpers. Competition included many district champions, Olympic stars and various title holders besides Birger Ruud, world's champion.

Children's Board In First Meeting

Mrs. F. J. Pfeifer of New London Named Fifth Member

Waupaca—The first meeting of the Waupaca County Children's board was held Thursday evening in the office of Abstract and Loan company, to select the fifth member of the board, inaugurated at the last session of the county board. Mrs. F. J. Pfeifer, New London, was chosen by the committee as that member. The remainder of the committee includes Judge A. M. Scheller, ex-officio; L. W. Miss Clara B. Lueck, county children's worker since 1936, will be under the jurisdiction of the board. Miss Lueck was in the county one-third time from May, 1936, to July, 1937, when it became possible for her to spend full time in Waupaca county. That program was made possible through a joint plan of the juvenile department of the state board of control and the state public welfare department. However after July, 1938, federal funds will no longer be available to continue the services of a welfare worker and the board will carry on the work.

Tavernkeepers Freed In Court at Waupaca

Waupaca—Charges against Clara Niemuth and Louis Smith, tavernkeepers living near Clintonville, of selling liquor to minors were dismissed when the boys failed to recognize them as the ones who had sold them liquor. The hearing was before Justice S. W. Johnson in the circuit court room Friday morning.

Warrants for the two tavernkeepers were based on testimony of a Marlon youth that he and several companions purchased and consumed a pint of whisky from one tavern and a half pint from another, on New Year's eve.

Arthur Gartzke, Helvetia, accused of assault, pleaded guilty before Justice S. W. Johnson Thursday and was fined $25 and costs or 30 days in jail. He chose the latter.

THE LAWRENCE PROGRAM

Appleton can well be pleased with the program of long term development announced for Lawrence college by President Thomas N. Barrows—pleased from the standpoint of civic pride and for very material reasons.

Until President Barrows' announcement this week, there was a general impression that at least a large portion (if not all) of the college would eventually be located south of the Fox river in the area adjacent to the Institute of Paper Chemistry. Certainly the trend pointed in that direction. Athletics, for the most part, had long since been transferred to Alexander gymnasium on the south bank of the Fox, and other parts of the campus, including "fraternity row," were apparently destined to follow.

The new program for Lawrence however, commits the college to remain on the north side of the river, and to greatly enlarge the scope of its activities there. Owners of property near the present campus should be greatly relieved to know that the threat of depressed land values—in-avoidable result of a general exodus of the college across the river—is definitely removed. The city can be relieved to know that its most distinguishing central landmark is in no danger of being either eliminated or allowed to stagnate.

Assuming—and sincerely hoping—that funds for the enlargement program will be forthcoming as each new phase is approached, the city can look forward to a steady program of construction that is bound to have its effect on local economic conditions. Furthermore, the sound, conservative manner in which the entire project has been worked out leaves us with no fear of the over-building and under-financing headache that has plagued some communities and colleges where the school went "over its head" to expand.

In one respect, Lawrence is not expanding. Instead of seeking to accommodate a greater number of students than are now enrolled at the institution, it seeks to better accommodate a number comparable to the total now studying at Lawrence. While Lawrence students are housed and taught under at least reasonably good conditions, the fact remains that many of the structures now serving them are old and have almost—if not already—outlived their usefulness. Other facilities are not altogether adequate in size.

True, the college must eventually replace or alter its buildings under any circumstances, but it is fortunate that this replacement and alteration will be carried out on so large a scale and under so sensible and forward-looking a plan. The unified and harmonized campus will be far more of a credit to the city than the scenes of spreading disorganization that characterize colleges and universities in some cities.

The city's part in this program from which it stands to benefit so greatly is simple to an extreme. Appleton needs to but close off a few unimportant streets to permit the college to go ahead with its plans. Permission to close these streets should be forthcoming as soon as it is requested.

TWO CHARGES AGAINST JUDGE GEIGER

Press dispatches declare that among the charges filed against Judge Geiger will be one pointing to his failure to hold regular terms of court at Green Bay and Oshkosh as provided by law.

A disinterested person could easily be convinced that Judge Geiger made a serious faux pas in failing to annually convene court at the cities named and advising the bar that he would expect to try at those places the lawsuits originating in their vicinity. Instead his attitude put the members of the bar on the defensive in merely requesting their legal rights which, in almost all instances, were made subject to the judge's convenience. An important feature of this charge is that it cost litigants from central and northern Wisconsin heavily.

No one perhaps will claim that the conduct of Judge Geiger in the matter amounted "to high crimes and misdemeanors" for which he is accountable to congress but it should be noticed that our very political attorney-general is endeavoring to buttress his personal charges with this other charge that was permitted to sink under the waves because it only affected scattered and unknown people in Wisconsin who didn't happen to wear the royal purple.

Pride, boastful, arrogant pride is the principal ingredient in the pretended charges against Judge Geiger. The attorney general had in mind a certain plan of procedure for the disposition of some cases. Judge Geiger vetoed it. The attorney-general belongs to a regime of such high-pressure egotism he expects federal judges to quake in his presence and tremble at the sound of his voice.

The failure of Judge Geiger for 25 years to hold court at Oshkosh and Green Bay when called to the notice of the Department of Justice in the past couldn't arouse it.

But when the Judge stepped upon an attorney-general's toes the big levers were swung and the ponderous and grinding machinery of the national government put into operation.

BUT A WOLF DOESN'T TALK

"Now this is the law of the jungle. As old and as true as the sky. And the wolf that shall keep it shall prosper. But the wolf that shall break it must die. As the creeper that girdles the tree, trunk. The law runneth forward and back. For the strength of the pack is the wolf. And the strength of the wolf is the pack."

Peter Anders formed a wily plot. He had seen lots of moths fly into destructive flames, and laughed at them. His plan was proof against every contingency.

The people know the general details. The ransomed person was slain. Dead men tell no tales. Anders' pal and confederate was slain, too. Why should a thick-headed bum share in such a rich ransom? Anders was smart, he was. He demanded the fruits brought in by his plans.

The bodies were concealed where they might have stayed for a thousand years unnoticed.

What did Anders care that the numbers on the ransomed bills were known? Simple thing to spend money and move on. Days sometimes passed before that money came under the scrutiny of bank clerks. And so he shuttled back and forth across the continent, spending his money surrounded by great crowds where there wasn't time to examine bills carefully. And then he was collared.

Still no corpus delicti, as the courts say, no bodies, no proof of murder.

But Anders talked. The crafty plotter exposed his plot, turned the key to the mystery over to the officers, blurted out full details that he was sure when he planned he never would tell.

Why kill Ross and then tell more than Ross could tell? Why kill his pal and then confess details only his pal knew? Who, indeed, can answer these questions even satisfactorily to himself?

There is something about clotted blood and rigor mortis, about stiff limbs and staring eyes, about murder in short, that is dreadful, in spells, to even the most hardened desperado. There is something in the makeup of man, in his spirit or that thing called conscience that breaks down all wily plots, dissolves every pledge of stoic silence and finally bares the truth out to high heaven, the truth that only high heaven knew.

Among the mysteries of the world where can be found anything more bewildering than the tendency of the most hardened rascal, when faced with some evidence and sharp questioners, to divulge all?

DON'T GET EXAGGERATED

The Post-Crescent is not assuming the role of an economic adviser, a college professor, nor a director of financial operations but it has an unusually strong conviction that the present recession in business, although acute in many quarters, is not and cannot be as destructive to the health of the country as the 1929 depression.

The banking structure in America today is the soundest it has ever been in our history as a nation. Probably at no time since 1789 was it so completely shot through with fake values and soft-headed practices as in 1929.

It is a case of patience, a just and honest optimism, and every shoulder to the wheel. But we must not forget that our economic machinery is tremendous in size and when once bogged down cannot be thrown into healthful momentum for months.

Business must have faith that a majority in the government will move to correct clearly demonstrated errors.

Opinions Of Others

IN THE SPRING:
Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck Co., has an explanation for the recession and a plan which would stimulate trade. He believes that conditions will mend in the spring. President Knudsen of General Motors explains the slump in terms quite similar, and sees a pickup in the spring. Gov. Murphy has a plan to halt the recession within a week or two. He sees a recovery in the spring. President Green of the AFL offers a seven-point program for recovery, and presumably looks for a business improvement in the spring.

In all this, one is impressed anew by the fact that there are economic forces quite beyond the control of any element that tries to influence them, that operate of a volition of their own without regard to any impulse applied from without. Unquestionably a trend in business may be established or accelerated or retarded by a common effort of all the affected agencies, or by some such catalytic eruption of popular feeling as the first Roosevelt election. But nothing less appears to disturb the rhythm of trade's ebb and flow.

The commentators who bespeak a close cooperation of economic and political interests to attain a consistent prosperity offer the only answer, if society is to be master of the forces which determine the degree of that prosperity. We have nothing like that cooperation now, as the present diversity of counsel attests. So we

THE BAKE SALE AT THE CHURCH

Sometimes we have the best dessert, And often it's the day. Our Mother says: "Here's just a snack; You know I've been away!" And then we know what to expect, And do not have to search. Our minds to realize there is A bake sale at the church!

The best cooks in the neighborhood Stir up the finest cakes; And Grandmother makes gingerbread, And what a lot she bakes! She says: "I like the Ladies Aid! To leave them in the lurch Would be a sin, so I support The bake sale at the church!"

They make some money—not a lot—These enterprising souls— But how the neighborhood enjoys Their cookies and raised rolls. Especially young wives, who through Their cook-books gaily search, But would not dare supply, just yet, The bake sale at the church! (Copyright, 1938)

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

SHORTNESS OF BREATH

Quickening of the breathing such as occurs with vigorous exercise in health or with slight effort or none in various diseases is medically termed tachypnea. It is to be distinguished from difficulty in breathing or labored breathing such as occurs during a paroxysm of asthma, which is called dyspnea. If the breathing is less difficult sitting up than lying down as in certain cases of heart disease, laryngitis, aneurism and bronchitis, it is called orthopnea.

Perhaps the most common cause of shortness of breath, breathlessness on exertion, short-windedness, is simple flabbiness, poor nutrition, lack of condition from lack of daily exercise. Next comes overweight or beginning obesity. Other causes are altitude, exposure to vitiated air (lack of sufficient ventilation in room), habitual or frequent exposure to air polluted with carbon monoxide, anemia, beginning diabetes, sometimes pleural effusion, that is, an accumulation of "water" in one or both pleural cavities, with or without painful pleurisy. In a good many instances short-windedness is due to the habit of taking one or another coarser derivatives such as acetaminol in one of the numerous nostrums in which this drug is the main ingredient. With the shortness of breath due to acetaminol or other drug there may or may not be a bluish appearance of the lips and nails of the whole skin surface due to grave interference with the oxygen-carrying function of the blood.

So it is obvious that no particular remedy will correct shortness of breath. In any case the only sensible course is to undergo a physical or health examination and then to follow the advice or instruction the physician gives.

In dyspnea from emphysema (ballooning of air-cells in the lungs) or from bronchitis (inflammation of bronchial tubes or in some cases of chronic bronchitis or asthma the difficulty is chiefly expiratory, due to impairment of the elasticity of lungs and chest. Therefore the wearing of an elastic belt, band or corset around the lower chest and belly often gives considerable comfort and help. Practice of the belly breathing exercise is beneficial in all of these conditions because, as patients well know, inflation is fairly good, but the old chest doesn't deflate so well. That's where a flexible, efficient belly proves a valuable asset.

In various illnesses associated with dulled consciousness or complete coma there is a periodic type of breathing in which the breathing waxes and wanes from deep and rapid to shallow and slow and intervals of many seconds duration when the breathing seems to cease altogether. This is called after the men who first described it, Cheyne-Stokes breathing; the patient may breathe much more regularly if kept in a more nearly upright position. In any case the patient's position should be changed every hour.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

What precautionary measures should be taken when a member of the household has cancer? Is it in any way communicable? Should one kiss such a person? (Mrs. M. J. R.)

Answer—Cancer is not communicable. Ordinary soap and water cleanliness is the best precaution against ordinary septic infection. Kissing is best avoided in any circumstance. Daughter eleven months old refuses to sleep during day. Sleeps

13½ hours at night. Doctor says her resistance will be lowered and she may get sick unless she sleeps more. She is bright, has good appetite. I have tried in vain keeping her indoors in darkened room. (Mrs. H. J. F.)

Answer—Rather keep her outdoors in sunshine. Take her for a ride in go-cart daily or at least set her out in cart or crib where she will get the air and sunshine and be safe from harm. Be sure she gets her daily ration of vitamin D. (Copyright, 1938)

Your Birthday

"AQUARIUS"
If January 23 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m. from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m., and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m.; from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

Your confidence in a certain person's sincerity may be put to a severe test this day. It will be good judgment not to jump to any conclusion without having a very logical reason. Social errors, due to a lack of attention to the rules of politeness, will embarrass you unless you keep on constant guard. Theoretically many ideas are likely to seem practical this day, until they are analyzed; then they are apt to be found not feasible. Try out nothing this day until you have given it considerable thought. It will be wise to accept nothing you overhear as being accurate, for many things said this day will be variously interpreted. Married and engaged couples, and those who have become Cupid's willing captives, should take nothing for granted this day, but have definite understandings regarding matters of importance.

If a woman and January 23 is your birthday, if you work in the right way you will always find a means of freeing yourself from unpleasant situations. Guard against permitting people to impose on your good nature. In business matters it will pay you to become a good listener, because you may be inclined to talk too freely for your own good. One of the greatest mistakes made by many persons' born on this date is to believe they are indispensable to those whom they serve. As a rule there is always someone ready to take your place. Marriages of those whose birth anniversary this is, generally turn out exceptionally well. You ought to excel in the musical, theatrical, literary or educational field.

The child born on January 23, is one of those who frequently "see visions and dream dreams." Generally of a poetic or creative imagination, this youngster ought to lay a good foundation upon which to build a brilliant future.

If a man and January 23 is your natal day, you probably never forget a kindness and should always be ready to forgive a wrong if sincerely regretted. Through art, acting, writing, politics, selling, manufacturing, banking or inventing fame and money may make you happy.

HOW TO AVOID WAR

Editor Post-Crescent: In time of peace, prepare for war! This statement is true, but what does peace mean? A great many people have created another machine with sufficient power to destroy the greatest war machine man could possibly devise.

If our people believe in a war machine for protection, they will perish by the machine. Therefore, they must study, must learn, must comprehend the existence of the great power "credit." Methods of teaching must not remain deceptive. The fundamental laws must be clearly defined. We must know how to control and use this great power for our individual and national protection. This involves so many factors and facts that considerable time is required to comprehend it clearly. However, a brief outline of credit as a defensive measure should stimulate a vision of that existence.

Power lies in the control of credit as between individuals. So it is between nations. A great nation must gain control of the credit of other nations in order to be powerful. The United States of America today has every requirement at hand to secure such control. The U.S.A. possesses an initial credit for a basic control of eleven billion dollars in war debts. As it exists at present, it is of no value. However, it may be converted into small denomination bonds by making a worthwhile reduction of the sum total. This would make the war debt very valuable to us as a means of securing the credit of doubtful or aggressive nations in exchange. This of course would not be sufficient. Our nation would be required to set up a system of international trade as an import and export agency in all important points, receiving reports of production and their monetary measurement, supplying credit only when secured by gold and silver in quantity, on a basis of ratio of market prices at the time of issue, of one to the other.

Applying this method we could acquire a desired amount of credit, which should equal the amount of precious metal held by the doubtful nations, as security for their money. Should it become necessary to destroy the doubtful nation, we would then unload their credit on the market in every point of the world, particularly within the doubtful nation. Also, we would unload our resources of commodity on the market, quoting prices in the doubtful nation money measurement underselling them by a good percentage, even though we lose millions of dollars.

This process increases the value of the doubtful nation's money measurement, causing other nations to offer commodity at a lower value, but with no credit, no gold, and no silver to buy, the answer is

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER
Washington — The anti-lynching bill is aimed at the south but the parts of the country suffering most from the filibuster against it are New York and Chicago, especially the latter.

Hardly a day passes but some of the southern senators reiterate that while in 1937 only eight negroes were lynched, the toll of gang killings in Chicago and New York in recent years is measured by dozens.

From The Record
Senator Russell of Georgia hunted out a crime report by J. Edgar Hoover, chief G-man, showing Chicago in 1935 had 243 murders and "non-negligent" manslaughters, and 221 in 1936. New York had 369 in 1935 and 384 in 1936.

Just to help out, he read a paragraph from a news story saying that on New Year's eve in Brooklyn, which he described as "a part of greater New York," the "patrons of the Church of the Holy Rosary celebrated their services an hour earlier than usual, and under the protection of a special police detail, on hand because of a long series of beatings and hold-ups in that section."

Senator McKellar of Tennessee then quoted from the Illinois crime survey report, which said:

"There have been no convictions in gang murders in Chicago during the period covered by this analysis—1925-37. This immunity from punishment is apparently due in part to collusion between politicians and racketeers and to the rule of silence required by the underworld code of ethics."

Cancelled Jackson's Debt
We must tell you about Andrew Jackson and the outdoor plumbing which almost got in the Congressional Record. Senator Bailey of North Carolina brought up the subject during a filibuster speech.

"One of the most interesting things I know about Andrew Jackson is that a judgment was taken against him when he left for Tennessee, which is recorded in Rowan county," Bailey said. "It remained on record against him for several years, but one day the news of the Battle of New Orleans came, and the creditor, I think, sneaked up there—he did not do it publicly—and wrote on the judgment, 'Cancelled—the victory of New Orleans.'"

"Will the senator tell us what that judgment was about," asked Senator Clark of Missouri, slyly. Bailey didn't know, but Clark did and told us afterward. He said Jackson and a group of young blades were angry at a leading citizen of Guilford, North Carolina, and one night rode up to his place on their horses. There they attached ropes to a certain out-building and pulled it over, halloing "win the fashion."

The owner ran out of his house and identified Jackson as one of the horsemen. He went to the court house and got a judgment for $8.00 against Jackson. But by that time Jackson was headed for Tennessee and the judgment lay unsettled for many years. Then came the news of that famous battle that was fought at New Orleans in 1815 after the war had ended. The note cancelling followed.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY GEORGE TUCKER

New York—The real terror of little boys who live in the nearby suburbs are the dog-catchers who drive around the streets in old trucks, armed with nets the size of bedspreads and stout clubs. I suppose this action is justified. Still, it was with a thrill of exaltation that I saw a group of outraged kids win a fine victory over a most impudent dog-catcher the other day.

There had been snow, one of the few light falls of a disappointing (to the kids) season. At their heels, as they wallowed in the slush and rubbed each other's faces in it, frolicked a dog, pride of one of the little boys.

Unnoticed by all a truck zoomed up, and a dog and a fellow with a big net got out.

"This dog has no business being on the street," he growled, "I'm going to take him in." With that he dropped the net over the dog and began gathering him in.

You never heard such a howl of angry young brats. And such words as "bitch" and "son of a bitch" were sobbing. Suddenly one fellow, about 14, gave a flying tackle and grabbed the dogcatcher about the knees. That acted as a signal and the mob of kids leaped on the dog-catcher. They took him back into the snow and stomped his face. He lunged, enraged, at one of the kids and cuffed him a nasty clip on the head. The kids gave him a few heavy kicks and suddenly scattered like magic. Within the twinkling of an eye the street was deserted with the exception of the dog-catcher. He was howling in his rage. And his lip had been cut, for he was bleeding. That was too bad—too bad, I mean they didn't succeed in kicking all his teeth out.

Naturally the SPCA has to guard against such things as streets being lined with dogs vicious enough to harm people. I don't even know whether the dog-catchers in these small towns in the metropolitan area are controlled by the SPCA. But if they are, they certainly could improve on the current lot, who seem to use little judgment in carrying out their tasks.

The incident with which this column is concerned is a case in point. The dog was a pup, maybe a year old. It was properly licensed and wore a collar. It was romping with its master and half a dozen of his friends. What harm was there in this?

financial collapse! A nation must have good credit in the world in order to promote a war machine, but it would be well to know more about the power of credit than that of the war machine.

Holt Plays Lead In G-Man Picture

Current Attraction at Elite
Shows Heroics Under
Machine Gun Fire

"Trapped by G-Men," a story of heroics under machine gun fire and drama among men who are not afraid to die, will be the feature attraction at the Elite theater today and Sunday. Jack Holt is starred in the film with Wynne Gibson, portraying the screen's first G-woman, Jack LaRue, C. Henry Gordon, William Bakewell, Arthur Hohl and Robert Emmett O'Connor in support.

Posing as the wife of Holt, who in turn masquerades as a fugitive outlaw to gain the confidence of gangsters, Miss Gibson's role brings to light the unsung heroism of the fearless and intelligent women in the federal service.

The story tells of the concerted drive by G-Men to wipe out the last of America's big-time gangsters, barricaded in a barren outpost in the Northwest mountains. On the same program will be shown "Walt Disney's Academy Award Revue," which presents as a unit the five Silly Symphonies that have been selected annually since 1932 by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences as the outstanding short subjects of their respective years.

Most moviegoers have seen at least one of these blue-ribbon-winning Silly Symphonies. They are: (1932) Flowers and Trees, (1933) Three Little Pigs, (1934) The Tortoise and the Hare, (1935) Three Orphan Kittens, and (1936) The Country Cousin.

Hollywood Sights and Sounds

BY ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood — Always fond of reaching into history's grabbag for film material, Cecil B. DeMille in his newest exploration has extracted a rich prize in "The Buccaneer."

Based on Lytle Saxon's opulent biography, "Lafitte the Pirate," decorated with further research and the customary embroidery of fiction, the new picture projects a neatly woven, romantic and action-filled tale of the famous "privateer" of Louisiana's Barataria bay.

Frederic March as the pirate chief, Jean Lafitte, one of the most colorful characters who ever walked across the pages of American history. Lafitte was born in Bordeaux, France, at some unknown date before the French Revolution. His birthday has never been established, although the late Huey Long of Louisiana declared one for him and made it a state holiday.

After serving for a time in Napoleon's armies, Lafitte moved to the New World to try his fortune. Gaining about him a band of famous outlaws from every corner of the world, he set up a pirate kingdom on the shores of the Gulf of Mexico not far from the thriving city of New Orleans. From his port of "Barataria" he carried on piracy in a gentlemanly manner, preying mostly upon Spanish vessels and establishing a set rule that American ships go unmolested at all times.

Although the customs officials of the United States, irked by the success of the pirate, sent a fleet of ships to destroy his base, the pirates' victory was complete. The average film-goer, intent on entertainment, should find it in "The Buccaneer" that he has seen a picture of a man who has been a pirate.

Frederic March plays Lafitte with expected dash and a fair restraint considering his swash-buckling role. His French accent, barring a few slips, is acceptable. In the heroine's role Paramount presents its new "find," Franciska Gaal, a little blonde of winsome charm with a flair for pathos and comedy that should prove profitable. Akum Tamiroff, as Lafitte's prime aide, is the picture-stealer as usual, but others in a remarkable cast.

Louise Fazenda contribute notably. The Andrew Jackson of Hugh Sothern shines with authority. Margaret Grahame, in a sympathetic role for a change, has warmth and beauty, and Walter Brennan as Jackson's backwoods orderly is a delight. Jan Keith, Douglas Dumbrille, Fred Kohler, Robert Barrat and a collection of the bluest, lustiest pirates Hollywood has seen further enliven the proceedings.

DeMille's spectacle finds its place in notable sequences depicting the American naval attack upon Lafitte's stronghold, and later in the Battle of New Orleans, where the pirates' vital part in protecting the city is admirably presented. Most thrilling sequence, however, is the dramatic assembling of the pirate clan, hastening in piousness through the hauntingly beautiful bayou country at Lafitte's call to arms. This, scored like the rest with George Antheil's music, is superb cinema.

Incredibly bad cinema is "Swing Your Lady." But having laughed throughout its rowdy, heavy-handed humor and roustabout comedy we must report that it is a pretty good movie. Humphrey Bogart has a dumb wrestler, Nat Pendleton, on a barnstorming tour. One of the barns they storm is that of Louise Fazenda, a lady blacksmith. Then comes Love, and more fun than you expect. There's mountain music, and swing—and a special hit for a bright and chipper miss newly named Penny Singleton, who used to be Dorothy McNulty. Ray Enright directed.

The week brought forth also Glenn Morris's debut as Tarzan, with Eleanor Holm as the city girl who gets taken with jungle ways. It's Tarzan, all right, which always has been enough and should be this time. Then there's another Penrod number (with the Mauch

IN CAST OF 'HOLLYWOOD HOTEL'

The above scene is from "Hollywood Hotel," coming to the Rio theater next Friday. Featured in the cast are Dick Powell, Rosemary Lane, Hugh Herbert, Glenda Farrell, Lola Lane, Johnnie Davis, Alan Mowbray, and Benny Goodman and his swing band. Also included is the Hollywood Hotel radio program with Louella Parsons, Frances Langford, Jerry Cooper, Ken Niles, Duane Thompson, and Raymond Paige and his orchestra. The added feature on this bill is "The Invisible Menace," an unusual mystery drama starring Boris Karloff.

'The Buccaneer' Will Be Shown Soon at Rio

A crucial but little-known chapter of American history is brought to life in "The Buccaneer," opening soon at the Rio theater. It is the story of a famous pirate king who was so notorious that the government put a price on his head, but who became one of the nation's outstanding heroes when he came to America's rescue in her darkest hour and helped Jackson turn the British away from the gates of New Orleans.

Frederic March is seen in the role of the pirate chief, Jean Lafitte, one of the most colorful characters who ever walked across the pages of American history. Myrna Loy Stars In New Picture

Franchot Tone and Rosalind Russell in Cast of
Show at Appleton

Queen of the movies, Myrna Loy, escapes marriage on one of her rare occasions in the ultra-modern comedy-drama "Man-Proof," now playing at the Appleton Theatre.

Staged against a metropolitan background, the new picture features Franchot Tone and Rosalind Russell with Miss Loy and boasts an admirable supporting cast headed by Walter Pidgeon.

Adapted from Fanny Heaslip Lea's best-seller novel, "The Four Marys," the new picture tells a modern story of modern romance and marriage. It was directed by Richard Thorpe who was at the helm of the two widely divergent pictures, the murder-drama "Night Must Fall," and the crackpot comedy "Double Wedding."

In her new role, Miss Loy plays a woman who is in love with Walter Pidgeon, a social climber. Pidgeon marries Rosalind Russell, society girl, and they depart on their honeymoon. One of Miss Loy's closest friends is Franchot Tone, a cartoonist who understands the futility of Miss Loy's love for Pidgeon. To him she confesses that she still loves Pidgeon and will exert every power to win him back.

When the honeymoon is over, Miss Loy resumes her siege, while Tone, loving Miss Loy, stands aside. Miss Russell discovers Pidgeon, Miss Loy's rooms and offers him a divorce with the understanding that he will lose his job with her wealthy father. Pidgeon refuses to accept a divorce and returns to his wife, and Miss Loy turns to Tone, realizing at last that they were meant for each other.

A distinguished supporting cast includes Rita Johnson, Nana Bryant, Ruth Hussey, Leonard Penn, John Miljan, William Stack, Oscar O'Shea and Dan Tobey.

An associate feature of this program, Joe E. Brown and Paul Kelly appear as rival newshawks in "Fit For a King," the comedian's latest mirth vehicle.

In a side-splitting story which tells of deep dark plots in a mythical European kingdom, Brown and Kelly battle each other and mutual enemies for the news.

NOW PLAYING AT APPLETON THEATER

Elected queen of the screen by a nation-wide poll... Myrna Loy now glorifies her most stirring dramatic smash, "Man-Proof," which is now playing at the Appleton Theatre. She does her darndest to pretend that she's "Man-Proof," but Franchot Tone and Walter Pidgeon soon disillusion her of any such idea. Rosalind Russell also plays an important part in the proceedings of the new romantic comedy. The outstanding cast in the picture includes Rita Johnson, Nana Bryant, Ruth Hussey, Leonard Penn, John Miljan, William Stack, Oscar O'Shea and Dan Tobey.

Fred MacMurray Tops Cast of 'Exclusive'

"Exclusive," the motion picture which will be shown at the Elite Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, Bargain Days, is one of the most exciting — and entertaining — pictures of the season. It is a thrilling newspaper story, intelligently enacted by an excellent cast headed by Fred MacMurray, Frances Farmer, Charlie Ruggles and Lloyd Nolan, and directed by one of the screen's finest directors.

The story concerns a war between two newspapers in a mid-western city. On the one hand there is a paper, which employs MacMurray and Ruggles, which is committed to a reform policy. On the other is a paper owned by Nolan, crooked politician, which he uses to cover up his high handed dealings and as a means to blackmail the city's leaders.

Failing to get MacMurray and Ruggles to work for him, he succeeds in getting Miss Farmer, Ruggles' daughter, who is unable to understand the principles which prevent her father, and MacMurray, her sweetheart, from accepting Nolan's offer. The powerful climax is reached when she discovers that she is being used as a tool by the suave Nolan and begins to appreciate the lofty ideals which motivated her father and sweetheart.

Music and Drama are Combined in 'Firefly'

"The Firefly," which comes to the Rialto Theater, Kaukauna, Tuesday and Wednesday, is the combination of music and drama for which the public has been waiting. The story makes no sacrifice for music. Yet, in the interesting fashion of life itself the melody rings in at opportune moments. And it is lovely melody, enhanced by a stirring beauty of background.

"The Firefly" is a picture that lights the way for future musicals.

Rio Is Showing 'The Hurricane'

Huge Wind Machines Used
In Filming South Sea
Storm Picture

A man-made fury of wind and wave, the storm that gives Samuel Goldwyn's South Sea Island drama, "The Hurricane," which is now playing at the Rio Theater, its name, was filmed with awe-inspiring realism.

No punches were pulled, no feelings spared as players and technicians took a beating almost equal to that dealt out to the South Sea Island village, which cost a fortune to build and another fortune to demolish.

The storm was filmed piece-meal of necessity. By the time it was ended, one of the most complete and beautiful settings in all Hollywood was a shambles and Dorothy Lamour, John Hall, Mary Astor, and C. Aubrey Smith were nearly nervous wrecks.

The hurricane is leveling one of its furious blasts as watch it in action. Nine huge wind machines are placed in strategic positions along the village shore of the setting's acre-and-a-half lagoon. Four of these gale manufacturers are 12 cylinder Liberty motors with giant three-blade propellers. Five are airplane motors, with propellers reversed to send the air surging outward instead of sucking inward. Each is capable of lashing out a 90-mile-an-hour gale. The mechanics start their motors. Smoke, some of it black, part of it tinged yellow, starts rising in a cloud from invisible sources behind the church on the shore.

Steadily the speed of the propellers increases. Palm fronds and leaves come skittering down the beach. Two of the giant Liberty engines are sending their blasts straight into the faces of the players. The din is terrific, the smoke cloud thickening. Gravel stings the faces of the players.

Arms shielding faces, bodies bent forward, the natives start running into the teeth of the gale. Hall has no such protection. He has his arms full, half carrying, half pulling Miss Lamour along.

A blinding drench of spray and the players are completely lost from sight. Step by step the players struggle forward. They gain the shelter of the trading post and the din begins to die away. Motors idle to a stop. The smoke pall lifts.

IT'S ODD But It's Science

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

Rochester, Minn.—Some of the things the wild waves of the brain are saying have been identified here at the Mayo Clinic.

These waves are pulsations of electricity. They flow naturally from every living head and with modern apparatus trace waves on a moving paper.

Not all the waves are wild and that is the significant point of the Mayo investigations, which are reported by C. L. Yeager, M. D., and E. J. Baldes, Ph. D.

From the brains of normal persons the waves were invariably attractive to look at. The wild ones, by comparison, are monstrous in irregularity and sharp corners. These wild waves always came from disordered brains, when the cause of disorder was within the brain.

And this—in the matter-of-fact language of the medical record—is what the wild brain waves said: the patients had—"parkinsonism (shaking palsy)," postencephalitis, Huntington's chorea (hereditary St. Vitus' dance), traumatic psychosis, arteriosclerosis, senility, mental deterioration, brain tumors and those schizophrenics who were in insidious coma."

Author Of The Week

STUART CHASE has gotten out of the world of economics into the world of words. He has written a book called "The Tyranny of Words" which proves, among other things, that nearly all common words mean nothing, because words mean nothing, because words mean to me, and vice versa. This is both valuable and shocking; for example, he asked more than 100 people what fascism meant, and no two agreed.

Men Should Marry Women Who Are in Their Class

BY DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix—I was much interested in the letter you recently published from the twenty-six young men who ran with a crowd of fast young women and then complained that they could not find a girl to marry who did not drink and smoke, tell off-color stories and pet. I would like to tell them how a nice girl feels about one of them when she marries him. That is what I did.

DOROTHY DIX

I fell in love with a handsome and fascinating young man who told me before we were married that my great attraction for him was that I didn't do the things that most of the modern girls do, and that I clung to the old-fashioned feminine virtues of chastity and modesty. We set up housekeeping and, of course, he invited his friends to our place. I served them delicious food but no drinks. Finally my husband insisted that our parties were too tame and that I was in the sulking his friends by not having highballs and cocktails, so we commenced having parties to his liking. After these affairs my house would be a wreck. All my lovely furniture spotted with spilled liquor and burned with cigarettes, holes burned in the rugs and cigarette butts all over the floors, like a night club.

Then the men started to try to paw me. They would say: "Come on, girlie, don't be a prude. Be a good fellow," and give me disgustingly wet kisses. This was bad enough, but it was worse when my husband said: "Why can't you be a good sport like Anne and Susie? What does it matter, we are all friends." He had been doing plenty of pawing and kissing himself, and seemed to be having a great time slipping off with certain girls.

That seemed to kill my soul. I lost all the love and respect I had for him. I asked him if he wanted that kind of a wife who he didn't marry her, and he said: "Oh, he did not want to live with one like that. He wanted a wife whom he could respect and whom he trusted."

Well, I am going to leave him. So please tell the men who like wild women to marry one of their own kind and not ruin the lives of girls who have clean minds and high ideals and of whom they will soon tire. A leopard cannot change its spots, and men who like a gay life seem to find a decent life boring and are always stepping out on their wives.

Dear Miss Dix—In regard to the letter from the young men who complain that they cannot find the snow-white kind of wives among the fast-stepping girls with whom they have been traveling, I would like to say: don't try it. If you do, you will surely regret it. I know, for I tried it.

After the thrill of marriage has worn off somewhat, it is a man's natural inclination to lead his former life. He is not going to turn down his old friends who liked the things that he liked, and you can bet the snow-white wife is going to balk at the old pals.

My advice to young men is to marry the kind of girls they have been associating with and then they will have real companions. Nothing makes more for harmony in marriage than for both to have the same ideals and to enjoy doing the same things. It would be just as silly for a man training for the ministry to marry a wild girl and expect her to live his life as it would for these boys to marry old-fashioned girls and expect to be happy after the first two years.

I would give anything if I had a wife who liked to drink with me and do the things I enjoy doing, and perhaps my wife feels the same way about a husband. While we married in good faith and she is a splendid

Declarer Makes Bid By Trap Play

BY ELY CULBERTSON

A very good motto for defenders to bear in mind is "Beware the declarer bearing gifts!" A skillful declarer does not permit the enemy to do what they have indicated they would like to do unless he has a very sound reason for being agreeable.

South, dealer.
East-West vulnerable.
Match point duplicate.

NORTH		EAST
10 9 4 3	6 5 4 3	A 6 5	K Q 7 5 3
Q 10 4 3	8 7 6 5	K 9	J 6 5
A 8 5 4	2	A 6 5	K Q 7 5 3

The bidding:
South West North East
1 spade 2 hearts Pass 3 hearts
Double Pass 3 spades Pass
Pass Pass

North's bid was virtually a phyllis and, when South doubled the opponents at a mere nine trick contract, North could not stand the double, therefore ran to three spades. South properly regarded this run out as a sign of great weakness, since North hardly would have taken out the double of a vulnerable team had he been reasonably strong.

West opened his fourth best heart. Dummy discarded a club. East played the queen and declarer won a diamond then was led the ten to the East, who promptly returned his remaining diamond. West won and shifted to a low club, hoping to find his partner with the queen. Declarer, however, captured East's jack with that valuable card and ruffed a heart in dummy. Then, since declarer very much feared he would lose two spade tricks and, with them, his contract, he attempted a trap play that possibly would reduce these trump losers to one trick. Realizing that East had been trying for a diamond ruff, declarer now offered him that opportunity by leading dummy's queen. East, fell, hook, line, and sinker. He ruffed, only to be over-ruffed by declarer's eight. A club now was led toward dummy. East hopped up and returned a club. Dummy won and led the spade ten. East ducked, but declarer, who already had seen two aces in West's hand, was in little doubt as to the location of the spade ace. Hence, he went right up with the spade king and returned a spade, which dropped the ace and queen together, and insured his contract.

Uncle Ray's Corner

A Little Saturday Talk

When I went inside the great Pyramid of Gizeh, something had gone wrong with the electric lighting system. So I carried a candle, and my guide did the same.

As I climbed the stairways, I thought of how dark it would be of any kind. Even with our candles, it was dark enough, and I had to take care to bend my head at the right time, so as not to get "bumped" along the way.

When we at last reached the King's Chamber, my guide said, "We are now at the exact center of the pyramid."

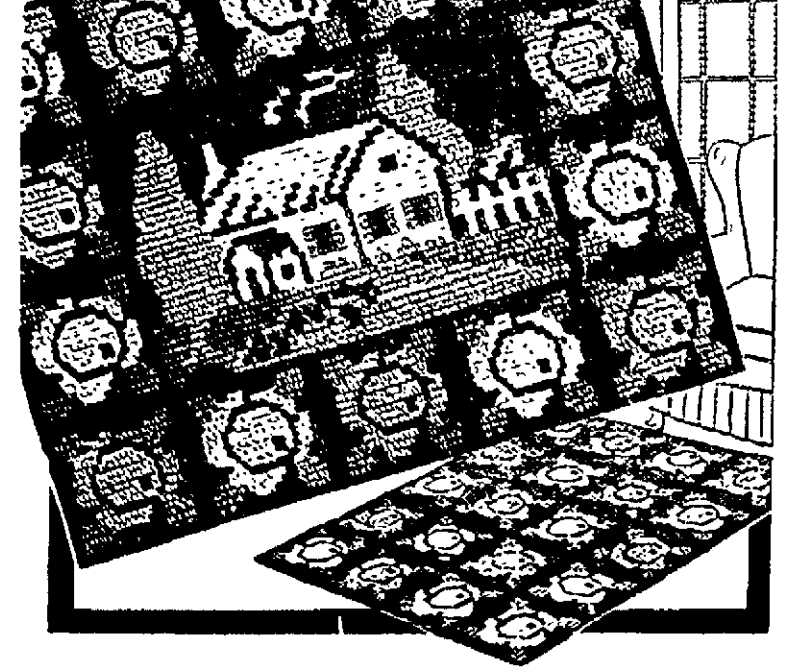

Guides sometimes make mistakes, and mine did in this case, for the room we had reached is really 16 feet south of the pyramid's center. It is, moreover, not much more than one-third as high above the ground as the apex, or top, of the pyramid. The ceiling of the King's Chamber is 19 feet high. The room is 34 feet long and 17 feet wide. There was plenty of space in it for treasures to be stored, but whatever treasures were there are gone now. The Great Pyramid was entered and robbed more than 2,000 years ago. To climb the outside of the pyramid takes about 15 minutes if the climbing is done in comfort. An Arab guide, however, offered to climb to the top, and come back again, in eight minutes. The record time, I was told, is seven minutes for the round trip.

My dragoman said no visitor ever had been killed while climbing up or down the Great Pyramid. It amused me later when a friend told me what his guide had said to him on the way down.

"Be careful not to hurt yourself," the guide had told him, "because if you get hurt, the government will hang me."

The Egyptian government wants as many tourists as possible to visit the country, because tourists bring money with them. For the sake of safety, it is a rule that every visitor who climbs the Great Pyramid must have a licensed native guide.

Youth Needs Training to Make Mark in The World

BY ANGELO PATRI

Life is worth while as long as one is happy in it, and no longer. Happiness is a personal matter quite beyond the reach of parental control, school control or government order. One is happy according to his own feeling and that feeling rises out of mental satisfaction with one's lot.

It is a law of nature that to be happy one must be useful, busy about something that helps the people concerned about the business. One makes dishes or washes them, as well as using them, or one does not make himself useful and so cannot make himself happy. It is well to remember this when we are trying so mightily to help young people off to a good start.

Helping them to put themselves in the right attitude to take what opportunity offers, training them so that they can have the ability to see the opportunity and make the most of it, is our only contribution. We cannot give them a single atom of power, a single gleam of intelligence. Giving them money won't help because it won't stick, being without those self-grown roots that make it a symbol of personal power. Lacking that, it is washed away as fast as it is given. Giving them jobs that they have not selected for themselves and for which they have not fitted themselves won't help either. The applied job is like the applied money. It has no self-grown roots and cannot stand up in bad weather.

The nub of the matter is that self-help is the only help that counts for anything. Self-activity, which means activity of mind and body under one's own direction, is what brings intelligence into life; and it is only then, when the intelligence moves the person to act worthily, that the worker feels content, satisfied and happy. Man is constituted so that taking makes him miserable unless he has the power to give in return. Youth has the right to training and education and opportunity. It is our duty to provide these. We cannot give them anything nor could they take anything worth while if they would.

I am not anxious to see the Youth of the world hard at work in factories, shops, offices, giving their strength to industrial labor or labor of other sorts. I still think that there are plenty of matured men and women to carry on the work of the world. Let the younger ones of the teens and early twenties complete their growth and training before starting out in competition with older workers. We are going to have a dearth of skilled workers, if it is not upon us now. The coming generation ought to be trained to do thorough, craftsmanlike, workmanlike jobs before they take over.

We have been making a mistake along this line. Boys and girls decided they would go to work. Somebody got them a job, any job, or stage by straight hair, braids, long, flowing tresses is one thing, and keeping the hair looking very attractive for ordinary wear when it is very straight is another. If you find straight hair at least as attractive as waves by all means wear it and accept your type and individuality. But my first concern would be a flattering effect.

Dry Skin
P. R. D. writes: My skin becomes unduly dry and sensitive in the winter and I don't know why that should be, or what to do about it. During the spring and summer it is normal or if anything a bit on the oily side. Please let me have some hints through your column.

During the spring and summer the oil glands are naturally more active than in the winter and there are no overheated interiors to tax them; nor cold, wintry winds outdoors to chafe the skin. Don't keep your house too hot. Don't use soap and water immediately before going out or coming in. Use cleansing cream instead and save the soap and water for use before retiring. Use a rich lubricating cream at bedtime and leave a thin film on overnight. Don't go outdoors without applying a protective cream. And keep your circulation stimulated by a few food, general exercises. My bulletins "How to Tell Your Skin" and "What to Do About It" is yours for the asking. Please enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

GOOD TASTE TODAY

BY EMILY POST

IN HONOR OF SOME ONE
Dear Mrs. Post: My cousin is giving a tea in my honor as I am going to be married soon. She is inviting her older friends, as well as some of mine. Am I supposed to stand receiving with her all the time, or would it be better for me to mingle with the guests? At this tea my cousin is wearing a long, rather semi-evening type of dress without hat or gloves. Am I supposed to go without a hat too? The reason I ask this question is that the party will be at her house and I do not live in the house. You wrote one time that the friends of the hostess who pour tea should never wear hats, and I wondered if this also applied to the guest of honor.

Answer: Under the circumstances, I think it would be better that you go without a hat, and while people are arriving receive with your cousin. Or, at least if you do not stand beside her, you should be near enough to join her when other new arrivals are announced so that she can introduce them to you. If you were pouring tea as a deputy hostess, you would probably then wear a hat. At least going without a hat at such a time would be unusual in New York as well as in many other cities. If you were a celebrity, a semi-public person, and some one were giving a formal tea for you, you would then wear a hat. In other words, I think it is the relationship of the hostess to you which makes the wearing of a hat out of place.

Dear Mrs. Post: My mother is giving a lunch party of about forty people and at this time she intends to "officially" announce my engagement. Some of the guests will be her own friends and the rest my own most intimate girl friends. How should the invitations be written?

Answer: The invitation should either be written in the third person on a partially engraved form or else on the first page of a double sheet of note paper. (A lunch party of forty is almost too large for invitations written on a visiting card.) Your mother would better not

To remove feathers from ducks, first pick them dry. This leaves a down all over the skin. To remove the down, bring out a large cloth in boiling water and wrap it around the duck for five minutes. Remove the cloth and the down can be wiped off easily with a dry cloth.

THE OLD COMBINATION
NINA suspected... She hoped... But, of course, I understand now... And she said: "Did you have a nice time?" in a strange little voice that was not at all her own... nor was the question what she had meant to ask. He bit his lip, and looked down at his shoes. "Sit down, David--over here, where it's comfortable." He followed Nina to the fireplace, and sat down on the couch opposite her. Button jumped up beside him, and laid his head on David's knee. The three of them, there together--The old combination that wasn't a combination, any more. She couldn't bear to look at them... and she couldn't bear not to. "I understand, Nina." "If I cry, or anything stupid, David, don't pay any attention to me, will you? Now that most of the work is over, I'm sort of--let down, I guess." Again--he looked down, up at the ceiling, anywhere but directly at her. He said: "Poor Nina... poor little kid." And all the tiny strength she had deserted her at the gentleness in his voice. Her heart seemed to melt up within her, and drip away in great drops. She could hear them... feel them; but when she looked down, she saw that they were tears falling on her hand. "You... see, David?" His brown eyes met hers, directly, for the first time. "Go ahead, cry..." he said softly. "I understand, Nina... I understand a lot more than you think, my dear. More than I did. I came here, mainly because of Honey, but now that we're together, let me speak about--us. Will you?"... Down there in Bermuda, and on the boat, I did some tall figuring, Nina, and it suddenly came to me why you had married me in the first place. I suddenly...

BOOK REVIEW

Latest Novel by Vicki Baum Tells Of Weird Rites on Island of Bali

By Jean Wiley Thickens

"TALE OF BALI" by Vicki Baum. About 10 years ago Vicki Baum won her literary spurs with the publication of "Grand Hotel." Since that time she has written a number of rather mediocre novels. "The Tale of Bali," the Literary Guild's selection for January is her most recent contribution.

The author states in her foreword that in 1916 she came by chance into the possession of some photographs of the then little known island of Bali. For nineteen years thereafter she burned with a passion to visit this paradise in the Pacific. Finally early in 1935 her dreams were realized. The privilege of viewing the real, native Bali, rather than merely the fringes which is all that is ever seen by the casual tourist, was due to a letter of introduction to Dr. Fabius which had been given her by a friend.

Oldest Dutch Resident
Dr. Fabius had the reputation of being the oldest Dutch resident in Bali. Somewhat of an eccentric, he still possessed a wide knowledge of Balinese life. He had an enviable reputation as a physician and possessed the entire confidence of the natives, who consulted him not only for their physical ills but also for their domestic difficulties. Shortly after her visit in Bali Vicki Baum received word of the sudden death of her elderly friend.

New Case Worker Is Named at Waupaca

Waupaca — Miss Constance Fraser, Ripon, has been employed by Pension administrator Hugh C. Johnson, as case worker for dependent children's aid, to replace Miss Eva Jorgensen who has resigned to accept a position with the Lutheran Welfare Society of Wisconsin, headquarters at Milwaukee. Miss Fraser is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and has recently been doing volunteer work with Fond du Lac county.

Miss Jorgensen will begin her new work Feb. 1. The Lutheran Welfare society cooperates with the juvenile department of the state board of control in its child welfare program throughout the state but

When his estate was settled it developed that he had bequeathed her an ancient tin trunk which was filled to bursting with a conglomeration of his papers, notes, essays, statistics, etc. Enclosed with these papers was a letter asking his young friend to try to bring order out of the chaos and publish the contents of the trunk in the form of a novel or a series of essays. "The Tale of Bali" is the result of her efforts to comply with his last request.

The date of Vicki Baum's novel coincides with that period in Balinese history when the natives were free and still practiced the same ancient customs which had been current on the island for thousands of years, and which they had adopted from India and Malaysia. The people worshipped the ancient gods of Vishnu and Shiva, the widows of the reigning rajahs were still being burned on their husbands' funeral pyres, and the superstitions and taboos of prehistoric times still flourished. Since that time the Dutch have been out an achievement in colonization which rewards natives greatly to their credit. The natives are still free to live their own lives under white rule with the minimum of interference from their conquerors, except where that interference is necessary to their well being. The story embraces the years 1904-6.

"The Tale of Bali" is not a book that everyone will enjoy, but the discriminating reader will enjoy it thoroughly. The action is slow and measured but as inevitable as the roll of the surf on the island's shining beaches. One is so completely carried along by the sweep and atmosphere of the story, and the strange, that the white world and its civilization seem far away and unreal. There are no white characters of any importance in the entire book. The novel recounts the lives and deaths, the loves, hates and fears of a great number of native characters, all of them so clearly delineated that the memory of such characters as Pak and his wife Puglug, of Raga and the beautiful Lambon (favorite wife of the rajah Alit and Raka's dearest friend) of the haughty priests and the fearful native witches are all limned on the reader's memory as though written in indelible ink. The marriage customs, religious festivals, the mass cremations (which are attended by the entire family in carriages), are described with meticulous clarity and read like the wildest fiction, though unquestionably authentic in every detail.

The native characters are simple, brave, superstitious and generous to their foes. They have no fear of death for they believe implicitly in the transmigration of souls, therefore they are convinced that they will live again on earth, perhaps in a form even more beautiful than the one they now inhabit.

Some of the scenes described in this "Tale of Bali," such as the burning at Tabanan, when hundreds of natives committed mass suicide rather than fall into the hands of the Dutch soldiery, are epics in quality. The book deserves more than passing notice.

Concerted Action Is Seen as Way to Boost Kaukauna

500 Persons Hear University Speakers at Community Meeting

Kaukauna — Concerted action by a thinking community was the keynote of addresses by three University of Wisconsin professors at the booster meeting held last night at the civic auditorium before a crowd of 500. The speakers were Professors R. J. Colbert, Andrew Hopkins and Frank O. Holt.

Mayor Lewis F. Nelson in a brief introductory speech thanked those present for their cooperation, and stated that the purpose of the community movement was, first of all, to make jobs for those now unemployed and secondly, to provide jobs for the workers of tomorrow, all through the securing of more industries and the development of those now operating.

Nelson then turned the meeting over to George R. Greenwood, recently elected president of the Kaukauna Association, who introduced each speaker in turn. Others on the speakers platform were Walter P. Hagman, principal of the Outagamie Rural Training school, William T. Sullivan, director of the Kaukauna Vocational school, Lester J. Brenzel, city clerk and secretary of the advancement association, W. H. Cooper, president of the common council, Anton Miller, regent of the university, and Chester A. Dumond, of the Outagamie county agricultural agent's office.

Must Outline Plan
"I will describe some of the things to be thought through to attain the objectives outlined by Mayor Lewis Nelson in a reasonably short time," R. J. Colbert, economics professor, began.

It must be remembered that the world is in a state of constant change, Colbert continued, and it is now necessary for communities to think out an extensive and intensive plan for development.

"Kaukauna, at one time had a monopoly on the trade of a certain area about the city. But changes in highways, automobiles, telephones, the press—all have created a new setting. People are no longer limited by distances of a few miles in trading. In order to recapture much of the trade which has been lost, we must work together as a community. Population is not stationary. It moves toward the centers of economic advantage, and it is up to the men of Kaukauna to make Kaukauna one of those centers."

Organization Vital
A community without a plan for action is one that will decline, Colbert pointed out. During the depression, he said, those that were workers in industry, those that were not had to use the dole.

"People will go to the churches, to the schools, to the recreational centers, where they will get what they want. Kaukauna must be made their center of business."

The industrial history of the city was briefly reviewed. Industries, such as the sawmills and the railroad shops and others, have come and gone here, he pointed out.

"Why did they leave? Why were not adjustments made to keep them? The answer to these questions is that preceding generations left too much to several people. A single group, no matter how efficient, can not take the place of community action."

Suggests Study
Colbert suggested that the adults of Kaukauna get together and study the problems before them, remarking that the time has come for adults as well as children to contribute to the learning. "We cannot leave things to an individual or a group," he concluded. "There must be a broad, deep and sound community understanding."

Professor Andrew Hopkins of the university agricultural department began by commenting on the natural beauties of the city, describing it as a fine place in which to live. Hopkins, whose topic was "Mutual Dependence of City and Surrounding Farm Community," pleaded for the wiping out of a "city limit."

The education of agricultural students in city high schools was commended by Hopkins as one of the best methods promoting a better understanding between country and city.

"The attitude of surrounding rural territory will make or break a city," Hopkins said. "A city will thrive on friendly business relations with farming to the mutual gain of both. It is up to you to promote those friendly relations."

Efficient Operation
Concrete suggestions offered farmers to improve their economic position, were working a family size farm; diversification of crops; growing more of their own feed; thus keeping more money in their district and state; improve their strains and brands; better breeding; conservation of land and water resources; efficient marketing.

Dean Frank O. Holt of the University of Wisconsin extension division spoke last, talking of "Teamwork." Holt especially emphasized that the services of the state university were as much those of the adults of the state as of the students at Madison.

"It is the interchange of ideas possibly only in democracies, that will redound to the good of a community," Holt said. "I pledge the services of the university to you in your project—its laboratories, its men and its facilities."

Is Interchange Necessary
There is such a thing of justifiable community egoism, he continued, and such pride is necessary to continued development. "I know the problem faced here by your mayor and council," Holt stated, "it is that of arousing a community morale sufficient to carry the city forward." This has been done in other lines, he continued, citing the city's educational system as one not to be excused in the state and commending James F. Cavanaugh, superintendent of schools, for the results obtained.

"Communities," Holt concluded,

ROYAL MAIL FAVORED

Upson, England — (G) — Bookmakers are already tempting Grand National steeplechase bettors by quoting 100 to 8 odds on Royal Mail.

Another jumper figured a likely contender is Airspeed Six, listed at 18 to 1. Airspeed Six, an uncanny jumper bought in 1935 by Sir Francis Owen for $1,250, easily won the 2 1/2-mile open steeplechase at Newbury, whipping Keilsboro Jack, 1933 Grand National victor, by several lengths.

Kimberly Expects Crowd At Sunday's Game at Club

Kimberly — Final arrangements were completed Friday for the big game at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon when the Kimberly Panthers, a Negro team at the clubhouse. Additional bleachers have been erected and the balcony will be opened if necessary.

The group in charge of the advance sale of tickets, reports satisfactory results and a large crowd is expected as there are over 200 members in the athletic association who plan on seeing the game. This is the first year that basketball and other sports are sponsored by the association which was organized last March.

The A's, who have nine straight wins, are leaving nothing undone in the way of workouts for the tenth victory Sunday. This week they scrimmaged Lawrence college at Appleton and earlier scrimmaged the Oshkosh All Stars. They also have had regular workouts at the club gym.

A number of Little Chute fans are expected to see the Papermakers' action. A game between the two village teams probably will be played as soon as a date can be agreed upon. The Chuteers are loop leaders in the County league and are the only top notchers that the A's have not met. The Kaukauna Mellow Brewers, Chilton, and the Green Bay A. A's were among the leaders in their respective leagues, defeated by the Papermakers recently.

In the preliminary Sunday the Kimberly Independents will clash with Omro. The game will get underway at 2 o'clock.

DiMaggio's Rebuff to Ruppert Keeps Holdout Society From Being Bust

NEW YORK — (G) — When that young "upstart," Joe DiMaggio, ambled out of Colonel Jake Ruppert's brewery, remarking on the excellence of the colonel's brew and the reverse of the colonel's salary offers, he just about saved the holdout and howl society from becoming a complete bust.

Until jolting Joe turned thumbs down on a $25,000 offer, leading to the general impression that he wanted his $377 wages of $15,000, doubled or better, the current contract squabble session was about as lifeless as a plate of boiled tripe.

There has been plenty of quantity, with some 20 members of the big league cast already dissatisfied by the material of the holdout society. Since Dizzy Dean crossed the boys by pulling in his annual storm signals and emitting just a mild breeze of a squawk over a cut from $23,500 to $10,000, there hasn't been any more rumpus than the night before Christmas.

Brown's Offer to "Please" — Few, if any, of the lads have come up this spring with anything startling in the way of "telling the boss." Billy Knickerbocker, the St. Louis Browns' shortstop, must have tried it when the club sliced his pay in half. But the management asked to which minor league club he'd prefer going—since, as the Browns explained, "we always try to please the boys."

Poot Poffenberger, the young Detroit pitcher, sounded off with a blast, accompanying the return of his unsigned contract.

But that's been about the extent of the fireworks. Of course, it's still early—since a holdout isn't a holdout until he doesn't show up for spring training—but the squawkers will have to be lots louder, and funnier, to bring this meeting of the society up to par.

Even Zeke Bonura, the White Sox first baseman and howling expert, doesn't seem up to his usual form. All he's done is return his contract, because the raise he was offered over his $12,000 pay of 1937 wasn't enough. His teammate Luke Sewell wants $15,000—or a bust—while Ted Lyons, Rip Radcliffe, Whitey Berger, Sugar Cain and Monte Stratton are also unsigned as yet.

Dizzy Dean's argument with the Cardinals this year isn't attracting even as much attention as those the Gas House gang is having with Ducky Medwick and Johnny Mize, the win thumpers of the lineup.

Joe DiMaggio wants more of a raise than was offered, but he's satisfied with the $17,500 offered—but would like minor adjustments in a bonus clause.

Paul Derringer, the Reds' pitcher, and Paul Waner, the Pirates' pounder, have let off some steam of sorts, but not enough to start any engines. Waner and his pitching mate, Cy Blanton, have returned unsigned contracts, Derringer couldn't get a $15,000 cut, and signed for $12,000. Bob Feller is the only current critic of Cleveland terms. Bob is satisfied with the $17,500 offered—but would like minor adjustments in a bonus clause.

Gold Shares Rally While Most Shares Are at Standstill

Court Decisions Have No Effect on New York Exchange

BY VICTOR EUBANK

New York—(U.S.A.)—Selected gold mining issues put on a small rally by themselves in today's stock market but many leaders were virtually at a standstill.

The few who had expected the list to nose-dive following the government's sweeping TVA victory in the Chattanooga federal court were agreeably surprised when even the utilities refused to give ground except in minor fractions.

Dealings were comparatively slow throughout the brief session and "thinness" of the market was exemplified by occasional wide spread between bid and asked prices.

Transfers approximated 450,000 shares.

Steels Indifferent

Steels were indifferent, although President B. F. Fairless of the United States Steel corporation, in a statement to the senate unemployment committee, estimated this concern earned 6 per cent on its investment last year. He added that prices could not be reduced without a corresponding reduction of wages and other costs.

The "guilty" verdict in the government's anti-trust case against 46 defendants handed down by a jury at Madison, Wis., failed to disturb the petroleum shares unduly. Most held to a narrow range.

Unchanged to up as much as a point or so were Homestake, Dome, Alaska Juneau, Bethlehem Steel, Sears Roebuck, Macy, Texas Corporation, N. Y. Central, Southern Railway, Southern Pacific, Socony and Chesapeake and Ohio.

Difficulties were encountered by United States Steel, General Motors, United States Rubber, Goodrich, J. I. Case, Westinghouse, DuPont, Union Carbide, Northern Pacific, Philip Morris, Owens-Illinois, American Metal, American Smelting, Consolidated Edison, Western Union, American Telephone, and Graham-Paige.

Idaho's Publicity Law Is Facing Court Test

Boise, Idaho—(AP)—"Anyone want to buy Idaho potatoes, prunes, apples, onions?"

The state government wants to know, but litigation has silenced its ballyhoo program.

The legislature last May appropriated $30,000 and enacted a 1-cent per hundredweight excise tax on potatoes, onions, prunes and apples marketed in Idaho to finance a nationwide publicity program.

Then a group of farmers brought suit charging the tax is discriminatory and that if it is allowed on the statute books other products may be taxed, too.

The suit cut off the appropriation voted the agricultural advertising commission almost as soon as the commission went into action. A hearing is set for Feb. 4.

VAN ZEELAND'S FORM FAMILY TRIO
These young musicians are the daughters and son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Michler, 1000 Oviatt Street, Kaukauna, Wisconsin.
Billy, the youngest, is an enthusiastic student on the piano accordion; Jean has had one year's instruction on the mandolin and has made various public appearances. Audrey, the eldest, has completed a course on the Spanish guitar, is now an advanced student on the Hawaiian Steel guitar and is contemplating on making music her future.
This is another example of what can be accomplished through taking lessons with the Van Zeeland Music Company. This picture also illustrates how the entire family can study from the Van Zeeland Conservatory of Music. They offer instructions on all stringed instruments, piano and piano accordion. All courses and instructors are credited.
When thinking of music, it is wise to think of the Van Zeeland Music Company, where you can find an instrument for every player and a price for every purse.

Appleton Travel Bureau Presents Pair of Lawrence Tours to Europe

Offering a choice of two routes—the southern and northern—the Third Annual Lawrence tour to Europe is scheduled to get underway this summer, offering more than at any previous time in the history of this service. The northern tour covers six weeks of travel and the southern tour takes seven weeks to complete.

If you are planning, or even dreaming of, such a trip, you'll be wise to contact the Appleton Travel Bureau, Zuelke building, for complete details on these two tours. Miss Elise Bohstedt, business manager of the bureau, will gladly explain the details and show how inexpensively such a tour can be made. You will be under no obligation, of course, nor do you have to be connected with Lawrence college in any way.

Since 1938 promises to eclipse all other years in European travel, you'll add to the pleasure of your next European trip by booking far in advance to assure yourself of good accommodations. Reservations on the Lawrence tours are made in order of application and, should your plans for next summer's vacation be changed, any deposit that you make will be refunded in full, up to the first of June.

The northern tour sails Friday, July 1, from Quebec Canada, on the Empress of Australia of the Canadian Pacific line. The southern tour, headed by Albert Gockin and Miss Bohstedt, leaves New York City on the day before, embarking on the S. S. Columbus of the North German Lloyd line. (Actually, the ship sails at 4 p. m. the night before.)

Those making the southern tour will land at Plymouth on July 7, going from there to London for four days, before sailing to Belgium and landing at Ostend. From Ostend, the tour moves to Bruges, thence to The Hague and to Amsterdam, Holland.

Next the tour goes to Cologne, Germany via Utrecht and Dusseldorf, staying in Cologne on Saturday night, July 16. On the next day the Rhine trip is scheduled, and by Bonn (beethoven's birthplace) to Cologne, by boat to Mayence and thence to Heidelberg. Subsequent trips take the tour to Nuremberg, Rothenberg and Munich. By this time another week will have passed and the tour moved on into Innsbruck, Austria.

From Austria the scene shifts to the City trip, David." And she held her breath.

"Tricked . . . Nina?"

"Yes. Richard lied about Honey, to get me there. Oh, I had thought I loved him once, I admitted it, but then I got over it, completely. Weeks ago, David . . . right after he came back from Europe; but he kept on pursuing me. He couldn't believe it. I wanted, so terribly, to tell you everything, but . . . but . . . Oh, let me tell you now, darling."

And she did, with absolute truthfulness, from the beginning. She laid everything bare about herself and Richard.

David sat listening, quietly. At first he still looked away from her; but as she went on—her voice all husky with emotion—he watched her more and more, until at last, his brown eyes never left her face. And Nina could see them changing; see something that had been in them go away . . . and something that had not been there, come back . . .

He was believing her.

"Richard has gone away now," she concluded. "Sailed for Europe. He asked me to marry him, but I said—no." Nina hesitated. "That ought to prove that I'm over it, oughtn't it, David?" She couldn't say, as she wanted to: "That ought to prove that I love you . . ."

"Yes," he answered slowly. "It should."

And Nina repeated: "Yes," sitting, like an anxious little girl, on the very edge of her cushion.

"I—Love—You, David!"

Suddenly David smiled. It was very nearly his old grin.

He said: "So—what, Nina?" and thought the question wasn't very much to go on, his smile, and the way he said it, gave her the courage to answer him.

"I—Love—You, David. I have, underneath, all along; only lately—these last weeks—I began to realize it. I fell in love, just as you were falling out of love, with me."

"I never—fell out!"

"Oh, how, what was he saying?"

"I'm loving you so very much this minute, that . . . that . . . but he preferred to show her."

He was across the four feet of carpet that separated them, and had her in his hands, before she could grasp the wonderful meaning of his words.

But she didn't have to. All the poor substitutes for heaven that she had thought she had experienced before paled into nothingness beside the radiance of this moment when he kissed her.

"I could have saved us—you—so much," he muttered, after an interval in which words had no part, "if I hadn't left you like a head-strong fool, my darling; if I'd given you a chance to explain."

"But, angel . . . how tiny that is, compared with what I could have saved us! . . . And, David, it isn't just that I've gotten over this thing and found something new. I've really learned a lesson . . . about values in life. I suppose you'd call it. What's worth while and what isn't. I may sound foolish to say, but I can be much happier with you now, than if all this had never happened . . . why, think of it! I might have gone on and on, just adoring you for your grin, and your copper hair, and the darling absurd things you do! I might never have appreciated . . ."

But he wouldn't let her go on. "And what about me? Don't you think there was any room for improvement there? How about if I'd been a little less headstrong and made you get over Richard, myself, instead of letting him do it? How about if I hadn't stuck to my ideas so bull-headedly, so that you would have been happier as my wife? How about . . ."

And now it was Nina who stopped him.

"How about if you stop trying to find faults in you that simply aren't there," she suggested softly, "and kissed me instead?"

And this time, when they started talking again, it was about the future; about the raise that had come with his new job on Long Island; about the little Queen Anne house, near Carl and Cordelia, at Harmony; that they could rent.

They talked, eagerly, hurriedly, between kisses . . . asked and answered questions, as though they had only so many minutes to be together . . . But now they had all their lives.

They clung together, as though two great giants were trying to pull them apart . . . but there was only Buton, tugging at David's coat. Nothing could separate them, now.

The past had ceased to exist. David had swept it away with one magnificent gesture of his arm, and one magnificent kick. "There it goes!" he said, and it was over. "Oh, darling . . . Oh, Nina . . ."

And she murmured: "Oh, David!" as though she had never said it before.

She hadn't, quite that way. This was different.

Berliner Beer Ends Experiment With Many Brands

Fred W. Kibbie Distributes Popular Brew in This Vicinity

Discriminating beer drinkers have long ago ceased "experimenting" with various brands of beer and generally have turned to Berliner Style to satisfy particular tastes, according to many lovers of this popular brew. Not only do these people make it a point to ask for their favorite wherever they go but make certain that a generous supply of Berliner bottle beer is always on hand at home for the enjoyment of guests as well as for family use.

The Berlin Brewing Company producers of Berliner Style beer insist first on wholesomeness in any product which leaves this establishment. It believes in correct methods of brewing to which is brought a master's experience, and they believe, too, in the value of "aging" beer. Hence, in making Berliner Style every possible effort is made to retain its flavor and wholesomeness during the entire process. This explains in no small measure why many people are being convinced daily of the taste superiority of which Berliner Style boasts.

Only the choicest of hops and yeast are used in the making of this beer; only the most deliberating care in production is observed and as a result Berliner Style is luxuriously full-bodied, rich, and gently stimulating. That is why Berliner beer has a generally surprising appeal which is bound to captivate you, too, if given a single trial.

Home delivery service of eighths and bottle beer may be had by phoning Fred W. Kibbie at 4626. A prompt and efficient delivery service is maintained.
